Only 45 genuine veterans of the Civil War appeared in New York city's Memorial Day parade. Thirteen marched on foot, the others rode. No wonder, the war ended seventy years ago.

Fifty-three thousand altogether marched in different parades, whereas 64,000, greatest National League baseball crowd on record, attended the "double-header" between the Giants and Brooklyns at New York's Polo Grounds. More than 25,000 were locked out after the 64,000 got in.

The Civil War, even the big war, happened a long time ago, whereas the "double-header" happened yesterday.

The 500-mile automobile race at Indianapolis yesterday was won by Kelly Petillo, of Huntington Park, Cal. Clay Weatherly, of Cincinnati, crashed into the wall of the north turn, and was killed. His mechanic, badly hurt, is not expected to live.

Such races are worth their cost. They produce better machines, better alloys of metal. Those that die would die a little later anyhow. Mechanical improvements live on forever, and benefit millions.

Decoration Day was quiet, with generally fair weather. Some soldiers lay dead in their graves, completely at peace, no more war or trenches for them.

Many of the big war's veterans will be at rest in their graves, apparently, before they get the bonus that was promised. Republics are grateful until the war is over and won. Then they ask, "After all, what is the difference between a man who fought in the army for a dollar a day and a man who stayed at home and, in safety, earned ten dollars a day?" The official answer is: "There is no great difference, after both become beggars in a depression."

Two intelligent young representatives of the Italian race, Mr. Marcello Girosi, manager of the Italian newspaper, Corriere d' America, and Mr. Franco Lalli, of Turin, Italy, called. First, they made it clear that, in their opinion, Mussolini is not merely a great man, but the greatest of all men.

Then, they asked: "What could be done to make Italy better understood in the United States?"

The answer was:

"Let the Italian government invite 1000 American school teachers from public high schools, primary schools and parochial schools to visit Italy for their summer vacations, on Italian ships as guests of Italy. Show them Naples, Sicily, Florence, Genoa, Pisa, Pompeii and magnificent Rome.

"Let them see for themselves the Pontine marshes, drained, and all the other work that Mussolini has done for his country. The 1000 school teachers thus invited, each year for five years, coming from all the principal cities of the United States, would do more than anything else could do to make the American people understand what a great nation the Italians are, and how fortunate we should be if we could have ten million more of them in this country."

One of the young Italian gentlemen said: "I am sure if you would make that suggestion direct to our leader, Mussolini, he would take your advice."

The suggestion is hereby made to him, "direct."

President Frederick H. Ecker, under whose direction the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company publishes health information for policy-holders, shows in a recent announcement that it is worth while to fight disease and spread information.

Working in co-operation with national, state and local organizations, the company reports for 1934: "New low mortality figures for practically all the diseases that public health forces combat with preventive efforts. Typhoid fever, tuberculosis, diphtheria, infant mortality and maternal mortality are reduced to the lowest death rates on record."

This means that millions live who formerly would have been dead. Consistent spreading of knowledge, in the fight against disease, is not only helpful to the public but, by lengthening the lives of policy-holders, it is most useful to Mr. Ecker's company, which carries twenty thousand million dollars of life insurance, and useful to all other insurance companies.

In Washington, President Roosevelt was said to be busy all Decoration Day with his able advisers, Donald Richberg, and others of NRA, seeking to rescue the more important of the codes. Extensive price-cutting was reported.

Senator Borah warns the country that manufacturers of "voluntary codes" must not violate the anti-trust laws. It seems that they are still alive.

Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, demands "immediate extension

BERGER HITS HOME RUN IN 7TH

By JOE CASHMAN

Braves Field, May 31—An injury-ridden team returned here this afternoon to open a five-game series with the league-leading New York Giants in a Ladies' Day double header which attracted a crowd of about 4000.

Babe Ruth, Randy Moore and Les Mallon were unable to play for the Tribe. Hal Lee was in left field in Ruth's place, Joe Coscarar spelled Mallon, and Joe Mowry replaced Moore in right.

Flint Rhem was Manager Bill McKechnie's pitching selection in the opener. He was opposed by Hal Schumacher, star right-hander of the Terrymen.

Ruth has a stiff knee and it is doubtful if he will get in any of the four games with the Giants.

Wally Berger connected with his sixth home run of the season in the seventh inning. The bases were empty at the time.

20,000 Dead Reported in India Quake

By Associated Press

Karachi, India, May 31—An estimate that 20,000 persons were killed today in Quetta alone by the earthquake which jarred northwest India was contained tonight in a wireless message from the Quetta wireless station.

The message was one of the first complete estimates to reach here since the earthshock wrecked all land communication lines throughout the district.

Earlier reports told of the Royal Air Force garrison, being badly hit with the death of 44 men. This last message said most of the other garrisons of soldiers had escaped the most serious damage.

The earthquake hit around 3 a. m. with three violent shocks.

Rescue work was under way with dispatch, according to the meagre advices.

Conservative reports here and at Simla, the summer capital of India, said there were at least 1000 persons killed in Quetta and that the village was in ruins.

Among those reported killed were Meredith Jones, of the political department, and his wife and her mother, Mrs. Bradford, an irrigation engineer named Francis, and also his wife.

The aviators reported killed included flying officer Charles Paylor.

14-YEAR TERM For Traitors Urged

A bill to increase the penalty for advocating overthrow of the state or federal government by force was filed today in the House of Representatives Daniel J. Honan of Wunthrop and John R. Shaughnessy of Quincy.

Present maximum penalty of a $1000 fine and three-year imprisonment would be increased under the bill to 14 years in State Prison.

STRIKERS BATTLE

Columbus, O., May 31 (AP)—Fighting broke out at the strike-torn Columbus Packing Company plant today between former employes and policemen.

FABER PLEA FAILS TO MOVE GOVERNOR

Abe Faber's mother and father pleaded with Governor Curley today to spare the life of their son.

The governor took their appeal under consideration.

Later he issued a statement indicating they had little grounds to hope he would interfere with the execution of sentence under which Faber, Murton Millen and Irving Millen are to die in the electric chair next week.

For 20 minutes in the executive office in the State House there was enacted the tragic drama of parents pleading for the life of an only child.

CLAIM ABE INSANE

They asked commutation of sentence to life imprisonment on the grounds that Abe was made insane by inherited disease.

Dr. William J. Brown, their family physician, accompanied them to support their plea and request another State mental examination of the doomed slayer.

Mrs. Rose Faber, who sacrificed necessities and comforts to give Abe an education at Technology, emerged from the conference dry-eyed but as pale as her imprisoned son.

Philip Faber, the little tailor who cut Abe's life along a pattern of dreams he could not fit, came out with a trembling lower lip, silent as to his hopes and fears.

When they had gone, Governor Curley issued the following statement:

"I received a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Faber and Dr. William J. Brown of 1009 Boylston street, who made a plea for clemency for Abraham Faber on the grounds he was not mentally responsible due to hereditary disease with which he is afflicted.

"I pointed out that the question of mentality had been gone into by medical authorities during the course of his trial and that Drs. L. Vernon Briggs and Earl Holt on March 6, 11 and 15, 1934, reported he was not suffering from any mental deficiency which would affect his criminal responsibility.

PROMISES TO CONSIDER

"They revealed in their report that they found him alert, cooperative and frank and that his conversation was relevant, coherent and spontaneous.

"They reported that they found no evidence of delusions, illusions, hallucinations, obsessions, compulsions or paranoical trends.

"I told the mother and father that I would be glad to take under consideration the plea made by them and also the statement of the doctor, but that in the last analysis I would arrive at my own decision in the case, and that that decision would be based on the facts and evidence and the justice of the action I might take."

In this fashion, gently, the governor appeared to have closed the door on the hopes of the Fabers just as, a week ago, he closed the door on the Millens' hopes.

"God is good," said Mrs. Faber before the governor received her.

"We have not given up hope."

While their plea was being made, Faber's attorney announced two new moves.

William R. Scharton said he would present a petition signed by 15,000 persons to the Governor next Monday asking commutation.

Scharton said he also plans to ask an injunction forbidding Warden Frank Lanagan from carrying out the death sentence until a civil suit, in which Faber is the plaintiff, is tried in Federal court.

'God Is Good; We Still Have Hope!'

Abe Faber is their son—and they love him! So this sorrowing father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Faber, are still pleading that their boy be saved from death with Irving and Murton Millon in the electric chair. They're leaving the ofice of Governor Curley, after an interview today in which they begged again for a commutation of Abe Faber's sentence. "God is good," said the mother. "We have not given up hope." (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Lynn Doctor Scalds to Death

Dr. Fred F. Dow, Lynn osteopath, was scalded to death in his bathtub today.

He was found in a tub of scalding water by his wife, Veronica.

According to Mrs. Dow, the doctor had been in the bathroom but a few minutes when she was attracted to the room by the sound of running water.

She believes her husband was leaning over the tub when he fainted.

Dr. Dow, who was 40, lived in Fortesque court, Lynn.

COLLEGE HEAD To Face Red Probers

Chicago, May 31 (INS)—President Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago will be asked to take the stand again June 7 at the next session of the Illinois Senate committee investigating Communism.

President Hutchins has denied the charges of Charles R. Walgreen, drug merchant, that "subversive influences" were at work on the campus.

Balances and Receipts

Washington, May 31—Today's Treasury balance, $1,609,082,449; U. S. Customs receipts, $17,505,513.

PAIR AGAIN HELD In R. I. Arson Charge

New Bedford, May 31 (AP)—Two men arrested in March on Rhode Island arson charges and released when authorities declined to prosecute, were held again today on fugitive from justice complaints.

The men, Israel Davis, 55, real estate broker of New Bedford, and Harry Zurier of Fall River were arrested on secret indictments understood to have been returned as a result of the burning of a roadside stand at Warwick, R. I., owned by Davis and valued at $15,000.

SAVING DIME Costs 15 Days

Samuel Shikofsky, of Wildwood street, Mattapan, tried to save 10 cents, yesterday, by placing a slug in the turnstiles at Eglaston square.

Today he began a 15-day sentence in the Charles street jail.

He was found guilty by Judge Hayden in Roxbury court of evading his fare.

BANDITS KILL 8 in Mexico

Durango, Mexico, May 31 (INS)—Bandits today ambushed an automobile in which Lt. Col. Roberto Almada and his family were travelling near Mortillero, and slaughtered the eight occupants.

Federal troops set out in pursuit of the outlaws.

Five Children Perish in Fire

By Associated Press

Toronto, May 31—Five of the six children of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Scott perished today when fire destroyed their frame residence in Alberwood, a suburb. The children ranged in age from 15 months to 13 years. The whole family was asleep when flames swept the house.

STOCKING BANK Fails for $405

Failure of the old reliable "first national" bank shocked thrifty girls today.

The monetary crisis was inspired by a report to Somerville police by Mrs. Alice Turner of Canton avenue, Milton, that four $100 bills and a $5 bill, supposedly safely tucked inside her stocking top, mysteriously vanished while she was on a motor trip to Somerville from her home.

Red Sox Rained Out

New York, May 31—Rain today washed out the game scheduled in Yankee Stadium between the Yanks and Red Sox. The teams will open their series tomorrow with a double-header.

SEES RETURN TO BUGGY ERA IN DECISION

By Associated Press

Washington, May 31—President Roosevelt said today that implications of the Supreme Court's NRA decision meant the end of the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, the Securities Commission and the Federal Alcohol Control Administration.

He told his crowded press conference the court's interpretation of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution took the nation back to "the horse and buggy stage."

The issue drawn, he said, was that of taking away from the Federal government control over national economic and social conditions.

The President did not appear to deem it exactly necessary, however, to frame the issue through a constitutional amendment.

Evidently administration thought on the subject had not matured completely, as it considered what steps to take immediately to meet the problems raised by NRA's passing.

PEOPLE MUST DECIDE

Surrounded by Mrs. Roosevelt and his secretaries, the President spoke calmly and deliberately as he outlined the situation in part to the note-taking audience.

He had a copy of the decision in his hand and referred to it occasionally.

Outlining the "issue," Mr. Roosevelt said—in using the word he wanted it emphasized—that he did not consider it a "partisan issue."

He said it would have to be settled by a vote of the people—not necessarily this summer or fall or winter, but probably in the next four or five years.

Describing the ruling as perhaps the most important in the history of the nation, he said it was up to the people to decide now whether there shall be at different State attempts to regulate the economic and social life of the nation or whether this shall be a function of the Federal government.

BACK TO ERA OF 1789

Gravity was in his voice as he sat behind his desk for more than an hour and a half in conference with representatives of the press who crowded into the warm room.

ROOSEVELT SAYS NRA RULING RETURNS 'BUGGY ERA'

SEES AAA, ALCOHOL CONTROL ENDED BY DECISION

The implication of Monday's epochal decision, he said, as he flicked a cigarette ash and scanned faces before him, removed any federal jurisdiction over such major human activities as farming, manufacturing, mining and construction.

That he had been in serious reflection over the historic significance of this week's developments was manifest.

In his view, the unanimous Supreme Court interpretation of interstate commerce takes the nation back to the "horse and buggy stage" of 1789, when the interstate commerce clause was put into the Constitution.

Voicing the hope that the spirit of the voided codes for fair practices would be maintained on a voluntary basis, the President intimated he was ready to act next week in an attempt to counter results flowing from the court ruling.

The nature of his plans was withheld.

DEMAND FOR NRA

As to "pending cases," which were undefined, he said there would be an announcement today or tomorrow. Presumably this referred to cases on the NRA dockets at the time it was outlawed.

There will be other announcements along the same line over the week-end and early next week.

The President referred at the outset of the discussion to a batch of telegrams and letters lying on his desk, most of which—he said—asked that NRA be restored in some form or other.

He said he did not believe the people fully appreciated the vast implications of the Supreme Court decision, or such suggestions for renewal would not be made.

Attorney General Cummings and Solicitor General Reed were asked by him to receive and go over the vast pile of appeals and suggestions.

Mr. Roosevelt, who at times spoke with considerable feeling, disavowed speaking in criticism.

BIGGEST PEACE-TIME ISSUE

In some ways he thought the decision was the best thing that has happened because it clarifies "the issue."

With the federal government viewed by him now as unable to exercise control over the economic and social conditions of the people, the President said this was the only nation in the world without such authority.

In several ways, he emphasized he feels the issue is the biggest question ever before the country in a time of peace.

Reading from the decision, the President said the issue was brought about by the ruling of the court that the Federal Government has no power to regulate goods not actually in transit between states.

As to the court's assertion against the delegation of power by Congress to the President, declaring this unconstitutional in NRA, Mr. Roosevelt believed that problem could be met.

NONE JOBLESS THEN

His worry was clearly over the "interstate commerce" sections of the decision, to the effect that the goods must directly affect interstate commerce to be subject to federal jurisdiction.

When the interstate commerce clause was inserted in the Constitution by the framers, the debate showed one of the impelling reasons was to prevent states from erecting tariff barriers against each other.

He pointed out there was no problem then of unemployment and no social questions such as those of today.

In the years that have passed since, he said, the hope had been held out that interstate commerce clause could be interpreted in the light of new things, and that it could be recognized by legislation that a harmful practice in one part of the country could be prevented by the Federal government, on the theory it is working harm on another section.

This had been done on the theory that the Federal government, through the interstate commerce clause, has control over affairs indirectly affecting interstate commerce.

Returning power over the economic and social conditions of the people to the 48 different states, as it is seen by him, will mean "sectionalism."

Taller of the two brothers, playing dominoes so happily with their elder sister, is nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, Tacoma, Wash., lumber king's son, now held by kidnapers who demand ransom of $200,000. The money is ready, parents say. Yet they receive no news. "G-Men" press the search all across the nation. With George, in the domino game, are his brother Philip, six, and his sister, Anne, 13.

of currency as a substitute for NRA, and to maintain price levels."

In Siberia, families flesing in sleighs would occasionally throw a child to the wolves to check their speed. Flandin, French prime minister, throws his minister of finance overboard to placate the Chamber of Deputies. Losses of tens of millions in gold daily, rising on Tuesday to ninety-nine million dollars' worth of the yellow metal, with speculators maneuvering against the franc, worry the French, as they have not been worried since Hitler discarded the Versailles treaty.

Once more, and to be repeated often, the important thing is not merely to pay good wages, but to keep prices from going out of reach. Money is valuable for what it can buy. Ten millions in gold would do you little good on a desert island. You might be glad to exchange all the gold for one quart of goat's milk, or the hind leg of one goat.

It does a man little good to add ten or twenty per cent to the amount of wages if you add twenty or thirty per cent to what it costs him to live.

Clark, Once Governor Candidate, Jailed as Fagin

New York, May 31—Nelson B. Clark, in the prime of manhood, ran for governor of Massachusetts on the Bull Moose ticket in 1915. (He was defeated.)

In 1930 he organized the million-and-a-half-dollar Clark Chemical Company. It went into receivership.)

Six months ago he was arrested as the Fagin of a gang of youthful killers facing the electric chair for the murder of Patrolman James Killian during a luggage shop holdup.

Today, the law spoke to Nelson B. Clark.

Wrinkled and seedy, looking all of his 62 years, Clark heard Special Sessions Justice Hackenberg sentence him to an indeterminate penitentiary term for possession of a gun.

Said the court:

"We are going to keep you as long as possible away from the society against which you transgress. You left a blazing trail of crime in your wake."

Other charges are pending, including possession of stolen property.

Scanty Swim Suits Shock Swampscott

The men of Swampscott may gaze into mirrors and admire the expanse and breadth of their chests as much as they wish.

But when they appear on the beach without tops to their swimming suits, that's a different matter.

At least a number of Swampscott residents believe it is.

They have petitioned the Board of Selectmen for a ban from the beaches men swimmers who wear only trunks.

Most of the complaints, it was said, came from Blaney beach residents.

KIDNAP REWARD OF $25,000 PLANNED

G-MEN HUNT N. E. BANDIT

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

Tacoma, Wash., May 31—A $25,000 reward may be offered within a few days if kidnapers fail to exchange nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser for a $200,000 ransom, a trustworthy source reported here today.

This angle was injected into the case as the federal agents prepared to take charge under the Lindbergh law, which provides that after seven days a kidnap victim is presumed to have been slain or taken across a state line.

The curly-haired scion of the wealthy timber and lumber family was abducted last Friday.

Although ready for the child stealers, the demanded ransom has not been claimed. The offer of a reward, it was believed, might hasten George's delivery through the old adage of "money talks," in buying information.

The child's young parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyhaeuser, Jr., still were in seclusion.

The reward angle immediately caused watchers to wonder if a conference over such a move was the reason lights blazed behind drawn shades through the Weyerhaeuser house until 2:30 a. m.

Usually, since little George failed to come home from school for lunch a week ago today, the lights have been turned out by 1 a. m. except in the sickroom of his paralyzed grandmother, Mrs. George Walker.

There also was a lack of the customary night activity around the house. Only two persons called and but three departed.

Shortly after 10 o'clock two men and a woman drove away from the house. A few minutes later, a man alighted from a different automobile and entered the house.

Two minutes afterward a pedestrian, clad in a gray suit, was admitted at the front door. They could not be identified in the darkness.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

Tacoma, May 31—Ed Bentz, alleged Providence, R. I., bank bandit, and one-time associate of Albert Bates and "Machine Gun" Kelly, was disclosed today as the latest suspect in the George Weyerhaeuser kidnaping.

A Federal agent made the revelation with the remark, "We would like to talk to Bentz."

Even before the agent dropped the remark it was known authorities here have theorized over the possible connection of the 45-year-old Bentz with the disappearance of the curly-haired, nine-year-old scion of the wealthy lumber and logging dynasty.

Some of them believe that Bentz, last of the Bates gang, may have teamed with the remnants of the Karpis mob to stage the Weyerhaeuser $200,000 ransom plot.

The Karpis gang engineered the $200,000 Edwin G. Bremer "snatch" in St. Paul which had striking similarities to the kidnaping here. The Weyerheauser interests are centered in Tacoma and St. Paul.

Although Alvin Karpis and his henchman, Harry Campbell, are fugitives from the Bremer case, Tacoma authorities apparently took little stock in the statement of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence C. Reed, Tacoma apartment managers, that a man resembling Volney Davis of the Karpis mob rented an apartment here Saturday and left, with a woman, a few hours later.

However, theories that members of the Karpis gang were in the Pacific Northwest were strengthened by the statement in Seattle of Fred Stojack, University of Washington student, that he sat in a bus seat Friday with a man who was reading a letter addressed to Volney Davis, Karpis associate.

Belief "the Weyerhaeuser boy will be returned to his parents alive," was confidently expressed by William Cole, chief of the Washington State Patrol, which has been mobilized for the Weyerhaeuser case on Gov. Clarence D. Martin's orders.

It was the first time any officer connected with the case had made any statement about the kidnaping and permitted his name to be used. While Cole's terse sentence was sensational enough here, the more fact that he, an official in the case, made any statement was deemed even more significant than what he said.

Information that Bentz, a fugitive from Texas justice for two years, was sought in connection with the abduction, was heard shortly after a report that federal agents were looking for "a key man."

Bentz is believed to be desperately in need of money.

Bentz is listed here as having jumped $20,000 bail in Dallas, Tex., two years ago, climaxing a long record that started in 1921.

Bentz, then 16 years old, was arrested for burglary, broke jail, was recaptured and sent to the Washington State Reformatory at Monroe.

His was arrested again in Tacoma in 1916 for forgery and grand larceny.

Besides the Providence robbery, police say he is wanted in Dallas and Forth Worth, Texas; Grand Haven, Mich., and Danville, Vt.

Bentz was last known to have been in Tacoma two years ago, living with Bates and Kelly at nearby Steilacoom Lake.

Bentz gave his name as McLaughlin. He and Kelley were questioned, deputy sheriffs recalled today, but were not held. A few days later the party disappeared.

LUER KIDNAPING SUSPECT HELD

By Associated Press

Washington, May 31—J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, today announced the capture at Kansas City, Mo., of Walter Holland, better known as "Irish" O'Malley, wanted for the kidnaping of August Luer, at Alton, Ill.

At the same time Hoover said arrest of O'Malley last Monday solved the double bank robbery at Okemah, Okla., December 22, 1934.

"He was one of the ringleaders in the Luer kidnaping and our men have been hunting him two years," Hoover declared.

O'Malley was captured by special agents while attempting to enter a Kansas City apartment.

Although federal men reported he was armed with a .38 automatic pistol, he was captured without a struggle, Hoover said.

Six other persons have been sentenced in the Luer kidnaping, including three to life terms.

POLICE VETERAN ACCUSED

Accused by a West Roxbury mother of having attempted to attack her, a West Roxbury policeman faced suspension today.

Although high police officials professed not to know anything about the case, it was learn' , that the policeman, a veteran of 15 years in the department, had been questioned by Captain Thomas F. Glesvey of West Roxbury station.

The alleged attempted attack occurred early today after the policeman finished his tour of duty.

He is declared to have met the woman, to whom he is well known, and to have escorted her home from a florist's shop where she had worked late.

Then the policeman is alleged to have entered the house and to have attempted the attack.

Freeing herself, the woman returned to the florist's shop, operated by a relative, and told him. He notified the station.

The woman's husband is employed b ya taxicab company at night.

Smuggling Drive

Word was received from Washington today by customs officials here that a new drive is to be launched against maritime narcotic smugglers. Portholes may be so wired that no packages can be thrown overboard to smaller craft while ships are nearing port, it was said.

Move Started to Rewrite Constitution for NRA

By Associated Press

Washington, May 31—A group of House member was said to be preparing to assemble immediately to canvass the possibility of holding a convention to rewrite the Constitution and "make NRA legal."

Representative Maverick (D) Texas, who is planning to carry the issue to the nation in a radio address, said today that Representative Keller (D) Illinois, chairman of the group, would call the meeting "in the next few days."

At the same time, one Republican spokesman said:

"If NRA remains dead, prosperity will return with a job for every man."

Describing the rulings of the Supreme Court against NRA and the Frazier-Lemke Farm Moratorium act as forcing the country back "to a rule of fang and claw," Maverick asserted:

"Legislation can't go on forever being thwarted by the Supreme Court.

"The question is, are we going to go about it in an orderly way to obtain proper changes in government to insure our having a decent country to live in?"

URGES REPASSAGE PLAN

He said the court either ought to be deprived of the power to invalidate acts of Congress or some system should be established whereby any act held unconstitutional would become constitutional if repassed by Congress.

A constitutional convention, he said, could be "put through in a hurry if the American people would understand that it was a convention to adjust their economic welfare and set up an economic system that's fair, and if they could be sure that special interests wouldn't control it."

WRITTEN FOR COLONIES

"The Constitution was written for 13 widely separated, rural British colonies," Maverick asserted. "It is time political partisanship and demagoguery and business unfairness were over.

"From a studied viewpoint, we have got to apply the rules of modern political science and economics based on a machine age and the concentration of wealth."

The invalidation of the Farm Debts Moratorium Act, he said, will result in two to three million persons being put off their farms.

The high court's NRA findings, he said, will mean widespread strikes and a return of child labor.

Representative Taber (R), New York said if the administration permits NRA to remain dead the country will return to a prosperity in which every able-bodied man will have a job at good wages.

Taber, a critic of New Deal spending and advocate of a balanced budget, said industry is holding its breath to see if the administration "is going to take advantage of his golden opportunity to bring back recovery."

Mills in N. E. and South Cut Wages, Boost Hours

By International News Service

Washington, May 31—First strikes in the textile industry as the result of the Supreme Court's death blow to the NRA were reported to the capital today.

Discharge of union officials, slashing of wages and increase of hours above former code provisions were given as the reasons for labor disputes.

Report of the first strike was made to the Textile Labor Board by its southern representatives. Officials of the United Textile Workers also received reports of labor unrest.

Discharge of union organizers by the Walton Manufacturing Co., Monroe, Ga., precipitated a 100 per cent strike of 440 employes.

In Lincolnton, N. C., mills increased hours from 40 to 50 a week and reduced wages to a $15 maximum.

The United Textile Workers headquarters also said their representative in Providence had reported New England mills had increased hours from 40 to 48 a week.

In upper Pennsylvania, the textile headquarters learned, silk and garment manufacturers were slashing wages with the result that the leaders of both Unions were co-operating in plans for a general strike.

N. E. Silk Mills Hit By Ruling on NRA

By International News Service

Providence, May 31—Virtually all orders for silk from Rhode Island mills have been cancelled since the breakdown of the NRA, it was revealed today by mill men preparing to meet in New York Sunday to map a course to meet the crisis.

Believing that Connecticut mills are facing the same situation, local manufacturers predicted that within a week all silk looms in the two states would be idle.

2 MEN KILLED

Bridgeport, Conn., May 31—Two men, identified as Frank Powell, 50, and Leon Czepiel, 50, both of Bridgeport, were killed here when they were struck by an automobile wrecker truck while they were walking along Arctic street.

Forming A Third Party

PATTANGALL PRIME MOVER

Urges Democrats to Merge With G. O. P.

By Associated Press

Washington, May 31 — Two Democrats—Chief Justice William R. Pattangall of Maine and Bainbridge Colby—were reported today to be seeking the formation of a Republican-Democrat coalition to nominate a presidential candidate in 1936 in opposition to the New Deal.

Judge Pattangall, the Washington Post says, sent a letter to a friend here revealing that after resigning from the bench he would seek to promote a coalition movement to restore what he called "orderly government."

Colby, who was secretary of state under Woodrow Wilson, has also taken the initiative similarly, the paper adds.

He has proposed that a number of Democratic leaders meet in a southern city, preferably Richmond, Va., "to consider some form of political action that is for our country and above party."

Both men supported Roosevelt in 1932. Pattangall was one of the few visitors invited to go aboard the President's yawl when it sailed up the Maine coast.

He was named to the Maine Supreme Court in 1926. He has notified Governor Brann that he will retire July 16, shortly after reaching his 70th birthday.

In his letter he is quoted as saying that he had "enthusiastically supported President Roosevelt in 1932, but the course of the administration has been such that about a year ago I became thoroughly convinced that a continuance of its policies endangered constitutional governments.

"After I am relieved of my judicial duties I shall be perfectly free to devote considerable time to political matters, and intend doing so.

"I hardly need to say that my age precludes any personal ambition to serve in office, but I am anxious to assist in the restoration of orderly government, if it is possible to bring it about.

"Very obviously, the present administration is Democratic in name only, and, quite as obviously, the Republican party alone is incapable of defeating the leaders of the New Deal masquerading as Democrats.

"If the election of 1936 is conducted on the old party lines the southern and border states would be sure to give their electoral votes to President Roosevelt, and this would also be true of the Rocky Mountain states, and probably California and Nebraska.

"If, on the other hand, a combination could be effected between the members of the Republican party and Democrats who still respect Democratic principles and believe in Democratic ideals, it might be possible to replace the New Deal with a responsible administration.

"If an acceptable candidate for President could be nominated by independent Democrats and indorsed by Republicans with an equally prominent and acceptable member of the latter party selected as a vice-presidential candidate, there are several states which could be placed in the proper column,

"For Country, Above Party," Colby's Cry

By Associated Press

New York, May 31—Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under Woodrow Wilson, consistent critic of President Roosevelt's New Deal, today said he has written to a dozen or more fellow Democrats to propose "some form of political action that is for our country and above party."

He declined to add any comment to the content of the letters, in which he said in part:

"A conference of say 12 or 15 men who are members of the Democratic party and similarly minded on the fundamentals of the situation, to be held in a Southern city—Richmond, for instance.

"This would give opportunity for an exchange of views. Such further measures as should thereafter be taken might be determined in the course of the conference."

Pattangall Opposed Al Smith's Election

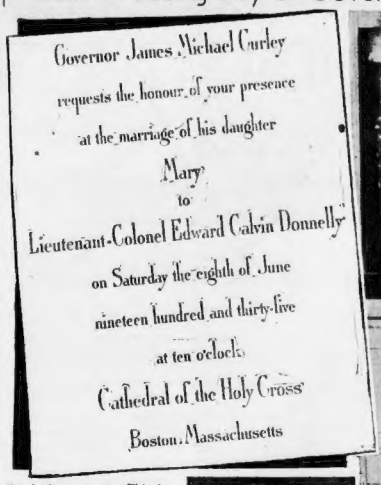

By Associated Press

Augusta, Me., May 31—William R. Pattangall, chief justice of Maine, was in the "wilds" today, far up in Aroostook County, and could not be reached for comment on Washington reports that he expected to align himself with a coalition party movement in the 1936 campaign.

Once a Democratic candidate for governor of Maine, Pattangall opposed the nomination of Alfred E. Smith for President in 1928, and after the election of President Roosevelt was outspoken against the New Deal, although a personal friend of the Chief Executive.

A few months ago he erased himself from the party rolls.

Valentino Raid Jails Blonde

By Associated Press

Hollywood, May 31—Weird rites before a rose-banked picture of Rudolph Valentino, with an ordinary typewriter used as a ouija board, landed a blonde film player and two companions in jail.

While police, mystified, tried to figure the thing out, the trio were booked on "suspicion of operating a bunco game," and the victim himself, John Wood, 20, was held on "suspicion of forgery."

Police quoted Wood as saying Marchen Bach, 20-year-old Danish actress, was the leader of the group and that solemn homage was paid before the Valentino shrine.

As part of the ritual, Wood said, Miss Bach sat at a typewriter and "received" cryptic code messages addressed to him.

Strangely enough, he said the messages—there were 12 of them—had to do with money, and invariably directed him to cash a check.

The trouble was, police said, Wood's checks were worthless.

Rudolph Steinbock, 33, and Rudolf Schulz, 30, were also held.

HUNGER STRIKE Ranks Thinning

New York, May 31 (AP)—The ranks of the six "hunger strikers" who have been camping in the offices of the emergency relief bureau since Wednesday afternoon, were reduced early today when one of them collapsed and was taken home 39 hours after the siege started. Five, weak from lack of food, remained.

The six, all crippled by infantile paralysis, had been spending the night sleeping on desks in the 12th floor offices in a building on Broadway at 20th street.

Girl Vanishes On Beach

Salisbury, May 31—Woods off the Lafayette highway here were the center of a search today for a mystery girl who disappeared from Salisbury Beach.

The girl was last seen entering the woods back of Red Feather farm late yesterday.

Only her first name, Katie, was known to police. She was described as about 26, short, dark, and wearing a green dress, black shoes and a light coat.

Police believed she came from Boston, where she was said to be the mother of two children.

DEATH For Mallet KILLER

BOY GUILTY BUT WIFE IS FREED

By Associated Press

London, May 31—George Percy Stoner today was found guilty of the "triangle murder" of Francis Mawson Rattenbury, architect, and sentenced to death. His co-defendant, the murdered man's widow, Alma, was acquitted.

The verdict ended one of the most sensational murder trials the Old Bailey has ever witnessed.

The couple—the boy aged 18 and the woman aged 38—were tried for the murder of the woman's elderly husband, Francis Mawson Rattenbury.

The Rattenburys lived for several years on Canada's Pacific Coast, and Mrs. Rattenbury spent her childhood in Kamloops.

The jury of 10 men and two women gave heed to the defense contention that Stoner struck the blow with a mallet that inflicted fatal injury to Rattenbury, but disregarded the plea that the youth was insane with drugs and jealousy at the time.

Not Insane

Justice Humphreys had instructed them there was no evidence that Stoner—if he was guilty—was insane at the time.

Justice Humphreys dealt at length with Mrs. Rattenbury's character in his instructions before the jury went out, including in his instructions the admonition:

"Beware you do not convict her of this crime because she was unfaithful."

In regard to Stoner, he said the jury had no more right to refuse to give effect to evidence from motives of pity than it had the right to refuse to give effect to evidence in Mrs. Rattenbury's case which might be in her favor, because they thoroughly despised her.

The judge told the jury that Stoner had been dominated by Mrs. Rattenbury.

Stoner was found guilty of striking Rattenbury on the head with a mallet, March 24, inflicting injuries from which the ageing architect died four days later.

Just like a poor fly, stuck on sticky flypaper! That's how this young lady, Ruth Bjorkman, three, of Cottage street, West Roxbury, says it feels to get yourself stuck fast in a great big pool of soft and sticky tar. She just couldn't get loose, and she might have been there now, if it hadn't been for four boys who came along and rescued her. They found her struggling but helpless in the gravel pits off East street, West Roxbury, not far from her home.

Burglar Grief

The "Safe-Cracker's Lament," a touching ballad, was composed about dawn today in Revere.

Burglars broke into the greenhouse of Thomas Roland, Inc., at 433 Malden street, and carried a 400-pound safe 300 yards into a field.

They huffed and puffed for two hours, police estimate, before they cracked it.

Its contents were unpaid bills.

KICKS KILL Child, Boy Held

New York, May 31 (US)—At 16, Sylvester Lancaric was head of an orphan family, but police said, he was jealous of his brother, John, 3, because a wealthy family wanted to adopt him.

So police arrested Sylvester as his brother was being buried and charged him with kicking the little fellow and causing his death. The boy's sister, Josephine, gave detectives their first clue.

TALMADGE PLOT SEEN TO BEAT ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Atlanta, Ga., May 31—The selection of Governor Eugene Talmadge as Democratic National Committeeman from Georgia opened new speculation today as to whether he plans to try to wrest the presidential nomination from Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936.

An avowed foe of administration policies, Talmadge has just been named committeeman by his hand-picked state executive committee.

The state executive committee backed the governor in his criticisms of the administration, called on Georgians to reiterate their adherence to the party platform and extolled Talmadge as the exponent of "pure Jeffersonian Democracy."

MIGHT JOIN G. O. P.

Talmadge has frequently charged administration leaders with departing from Jeffersonian Democratic principles.

The governor, as a result of his activities, has been mentioned as a possible third party leader, and some believe he might consider leadership of the Republican party with the understanding that it would be reorganized on the principles he contends the President has abandoned.

Talmadge has given little hint of his plans. In his speech of acceptance yesterday he said:

"I appreciate doubly the confidence that you have shown in me as a Democrat, representing the fundamental principles of the Democratic party, not only of the state of Georgia, but of the nation."

"IT MIGHT KILL HIM"

Talmadge succeeds the late Major John S. Cohen as national committeeman.

From Rep. Cox (D.) Georgia, in Washington came a prediction that Talmadge would have no voice in the national party affairs "until he has ceased his warfare on the party and its leader, the President."

Referring to the governor as "one who lives on vanity," Cox said:

"When it comes to his being seated, it should not be unreasonable to expect him to die of mortification."

$8 TOO LITTLE, BANDIT SHOOTS

Springfield, May 31—Dying in City Hospital today, a gunman's bullet in his abdomen, William F. Frey, 21, a gas station attendant, told police an amazing story.

Frey was alone in the station in State street, when a holdup man entered, armed with a nickel-plated revolver.

The bandit said:

"Come across with all your dough or I'll fill you full of lead!"

Frey handed him eight dollars Cursing because the loot was so little, the gunman shot Frey twice, once in the stomach and once in the left hand. Then the man escaped in a waiting automobile.

Two and a half hours after he was shot, Frey waited on a customer who noticed the youth looked weak and asked him the trouble.

Frey replied:

"I've been shot."

Then the man called the police, to whom the whole story was told.

8 Eager to Play Santa--- At $1008

By Associated Press

Washington, May 31—Five men and three women want to play Santa Claus and get paid for it —$1008 a year.

They have applied to the civil service commission for the postmastership of Santa Claus, Indiana, a post made famous by the late James Martin.

Every Christmas the little crossroads postoffice is swamped with children's appeals to Santa, requiring a special staff of handiers.

It was Martin's custom to see that as many as possible of the requests were met.

STEER SHOT By Police in Brighton

Patrolmen John R. Murphy and William J. Cronin of the Metropolitan police turned cowboys today to run down a steer that escaped from the Brighton abattoir.

While autoists dodged around the animal, the patrolmen chased it several blocks, finally catching up with it at the stadium. But instead of using a lasso, the policemen shot him.

WIFE'S $750,000 LOVE GIFT TO HUBBY BARED

By JOHN H. NOONAN

A $750,000 stock transfer for love was alleged today in an unique court action involving one of the most prominent families on the South Shore.

Mrs. Henrietta W. Doble, 70, of Quincy, claims she transferred the stock to her 72-year-old husband on his promise to reform his behavior with other women.

Her husband is William H. Doble, millionaire owner of the Pneumatic Scale Corporation, Ltd., of Norfolk Downs.

He didn't reform after obtaining the stock, according to his wife. She wants it back.

Doble has been infatuated by other women since 1923 and his affairs are a matter of public comment, his wife charges.

WED 51 YEARS

The Dobles were married 51 years ago and have eight adult children. Mrs. Doble lives on South street, Quincy, and her husband, according to her complaint, now lives in West Harwich.

Through David Stoneman, as counsel, she filed in Suffolk superior court a bill of complaint, naming as respondents her husband, the Pneumatic Scale Corp., Ltd., and Old Mill Point Club, Inc., which she alleges her husband controls.

The complaint set forth that in 1923 "William Doble became infatuated with women not members of his home and family, improperly devoting his time and attention to such women."

FAMILY HUMILIATED

He took no pains to conceal his actions, the complaint states, "and so flagrantly conducted himself that his affairs became a matter of public comment.

"During this time he showed complete indifference to the society and welfare of his wife and family and continued this course of conduct over a period of many years with resulting grief and humiliation to his wife and family."

Four years ago, Mrs. Doble maintains, her husband "falsely represented" that he repented his mode of living, regretted the sorrow he had caused and resolved to abandon the society of women outside his family.

PLEDGED REFORM

He promised, she claims, that if she would transfer to him 59,879 shares of Pneumatic stock, worth three-quarters of a million dollars, he would "reform his life, alter his mode of living and forever be a faithful and dutiful father."

She says she believed him and transferred the stock to him, and adds:

"During this period and since, he has continued his past behavior."

Mrs. Doble alleges her husband caused the transfer of her stocks through assignments to his nominee, the Old Mill Point Club, Inc., at West Harwich, for no consideration, and that the stock is now held for his benefit, dividends being paid to the club.

SEEKS BACK DIVIDENDS

Until 1923, the year she alleges Doble started misbehaving, Mrs. Doble was receiving dividends on 62,734 shares of Pneumatic Scale stock. From that year until the transfer upon his promise to be good, she claims he received the dividends without her authority or consent.

She asks that her husband be ordered to account for the stocks and dividends and that she be adjudged the owner; and that the corporation respondents be restrained from taking any action regarding them.

There are no names of "other women" in the complaint but a "Madame X" a Cape Cod beauty is said to figure in preparation of the case.

Witnesses, it is reported, will include a high state official of Florida and a daughter of the Dobles, now living in Oklahoma.

The children of the Dobles are Mrs. John Leavell of Tulsa, Okla.; Charles F. Doble of Great Neck, Long Island, N. Y.; Mrs. Herbert L. Williams of Bayside; Kendall D. Doble of Milton; Enoch P. Doble, who lives with his mother; William H. Doble, Jr., Hingham; Ralph N. Doble, Hingham, and Mrs. Thomas W. MacLeod of Bayside, L. I.

20-FOOT PLUNGE, Escapes Serious Hurt

Mrs. Annie M. Bright, 42, of Bailey road, Somerville, escaped death today in a 20-foot plunge when the railing of a piazza broke as she was shaking a rug.

"Buster," a dog owned by William Egan, a neighbor, saw the woman fall and his barking attracted other neighbors, who went to Mrs. Bright's assistance.

In Central Hospital, Somerville, examination failed to reveal any broken bones. She was held for observation.

FRENCH GOLD ALARM

Troops Guard National Bank As Bullion Drain Continues, New Cabinet Rushed

Paris, May 31—With Premier Flandin forced out by an overwhelming parliamentary vote and with the premier-designate, Fernand Bouisson, apparently unable to form a cabinet, political quarters said today that Edouard Herriot probably would be called upon again to serve as premier.

Meantime, with bayonets fixed, grim-faced troops guarded the Bank of France, as Bouisson struggled to form a new cabinet.

Police launched an intensive campaign to unearth the mysterious "foreign speculators" held responsible for the unprecedented drain on France's gold reserves.

Records of brokerage houses and banks were subjected to police scrutiny and telegrams dealing with speculative activities seized.

But in spite of their efforts the gold drain which precipitated the financial crisis forcing Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin out of office in dramatic circumstances early today continued unabated.

The bank has lost about 13,000,000,000 francs ($858,000,000) in gold since the rush of withdrawals started March 20.

An official statement shows that during the week ending May 24 3,166,000,000 francs in gold were withdrawn and, since then, it was officially announced in the Chamber, the losses have exceeded 1,000,000,000 francs daily.

The high point of the withdrawals, as stated by former Minister of Finance Louis Germain-Martin, was 1,500,000,000 on Tuesday alone, but since then, it was stated, withdrawals have been "undiminished," and in some quarters it was said they have been increased.

The rising national indignation against those responsible for the assault on the nation's gold holdings diminished the number of small depositors demanding coin and bullion at the bank.

President Lebrun summoned Jean Tannery, governor of the Bank of France, to the Elysee Palace to discuss the situation. It was understood the bank's supplies of pounds and dollars was exhausted, and officials telephoned to London for aid.

Dedicate Tablet

Millis, May 31—Speaking at the dedication of a war memorial in Memorial square here, the Rev. Joseph H. Cassidy accused the Japanese, Russians and Mexicans of striving for the overthrown of the U. S. government.

A 92-year-old G. A. R. veteran, J. Augustus Fitts, unveiled the monument.

ERA Head, Ousted, Sees Plot

Larceny charges brought by the town of Bellingham are all part of an attempt to "get him," Herbert R. Ambler, deposed ERA administrator, declared today.

Ambler said he welcomed the chance to go to court next Tuesday when a hearing on the alleged larceny of "not more than $100" of town funds is scheduled.

He said the whole thing revolved about reports of cans and fertilizer for a canning factory being missing. Ambler called the affair "a political frameup."

The full membership of the Board of Public Welfare and the Board of Selectmen in office during his ERA administrator will be witnesses for Ambler, he announced.

RETTICH MOVED TO JAIL HERE

Guarded by four automobile loads of detectives, deputy marshals and postoffice inspectors, Carl Rettich and Joseph Fisher, his brother-in-law, were moved from the state prison at Howard, R. I., today to Boston.

The alleged mail robbers, on Monday, will be arraigned in federal court here on federal indictments charging them with complicity in the $129,000 mail truck holdup.

Six other persons indicted in connection with the robbery also are awaiting trial in Boston.

In the four cars carrying the guards were machine guns, riot guns, revolvers, and tear gas bombs. The cars went through back roads as a precautionary measure.

Rettich and Fisher, after being received by Federal officials in Boston, were locked up at East Cambridge jail.

$7300 Plumbing Loot

Theft nonetlmeduring the holiday of plumbing supplies, valued at $7300, at the warehouse of R. H. Baker Co. at 143 Broadway, Cambridge, was discovered today.

Hunt Bride's Body in Lake

Eagle Lake, Me., May 31—Renewed search is underway today for Mrs. June Danforth Webster following discovery of the body of R. Seymour Webster of Boston, her husband.

Newly married, the couple were last fast fall on a canoe trip down the Allagash trail, which passes through here.

Webster's body was found in the water yesterday by State forestry men.

Mrs. Susan Webster, of Chestnut Hill avenue, Brighton, Mass., mother of the dead man, and his brother, Howard E. Webster, are expected here today to join Mrs. Katherine Danforth, mother of Webster's bride.

Dr. Norman H. Nickerson of Greenville, medical examiner of Piscataquis County, is attempting to ascertain whether foul play was a factor in the deaths.

3 REBELS DIE In Mexican Clash

Mexico City, May 31 (AP)—Three rebels were killed in a two-hour battle with federal forces in Estanito, Guanajuato, the war department announced today.

FIREBUG HUNT IN SOUTHBRIDGE

Southbridge, May 31—Selectmen here called an emergency meeting today to end the reign of arson terror.

Indications are that Governor Curley may be asked to send state troopers to reinforce local police and private guards on patrol.

The town fathers will also discuss posting rewards for apprehension of the firebugs who have taken a toll of $100,000 by three fires within four days.

All through the night floodlights played on the principal buildings here while 35 extra police were called in for patrol.

RIVER SUICIDE IDENTIFIED BY GLASSES

A youth vaulted the rail of Harvard bridge today as many persons watched. He plunged to his death in the Charles river.

The body was recovered with grappling irons, and at the morgue he was identified as Fred Souza, 20, houseman at Fenway hospital, Newbury street, Back Bay.

A note addressed to Anna Bogan, 1199 Tremont street, was found in his room. It read:

"My life is of no use to me. I can't stand poor health any more. Instead of dying slowly, I want to finish it now."

Identification was effected in an unusual way. Souza's spectacles bore the name of an optician, who made the identification from his prescription records after determining the strength of the glasses.

Traffic on Massachusetts avenue was jammed as motorists stopped on the bridge to run to the rail. Trolley car passengers also left stalled cars to watch efforts to save him.

A life preserver was thrown from the bridge but the youth did not reappear. The body was recovered after 15 minutes by Patrolman Augustus Crehan of the Boston police and Harvey Bartlett of the Metropolitan police.

The leap was seen by many motorists, pedestrians and others, including William L. Gallagher of Walnut road, Somerville, who was at work nearby; William Jodrie of Howard street, Malden, who was driving an auto, and Frank Dion of Craigie street, Somerville, on a street car.

BISHOP REFUSES TO OPEN GRAVE

Both District Attorney Warren I. Bishop of Middlesex county and the attorney general's office refused today to order exhumation of the body of Dr. Helen G. F. Welch, whose $300,000 will is being contested.

Bishop declared that the 68-year-old woman physician, now buried in Woodlawn cemetery, Everett, died in Florida and that Middlesex county officials are not interested in the case, unless the relatives or the state of Florida wish to pay the cost of exhumation and reburial.

Assistant Attorney General James J. Ronan asserted that exhumation and the services of a toxicologist to examine the organs would cost at least $500. He said:

"No substantial evidence was offered to us to warrant the authorization of such an exhumation at the state's expense."

Dr. Welch, a former East Boston girl, married nine husbands and had survived them all.

Under a codicil dated a few days before Dr. Welch's death, a niece, Mrs. James E. Nary, a brother, Dr. Charles O. Gibson, Mack of North Weymouth, and Olaf Olson, vice-president of the Old Colony Trust Company are named beneficiaries.

Mrs. Lillian Mack Bustin of Springfield, a sister of Mrs. Nary, heads the contesting group. It includes also James Waugh of Wellesley Hills, a grandnephew.

TRIES TO BURN Way From Car

Worcester, Mass., May 31—Almost suffocated by the fire he lit in an attempt to burn his way out of a box car, Albert H. Benham, unemployed laborer of New York City, was rescued by railroad police in a freight yard here.

Benham, who said he was "weak from two days' hunger, began to gag from smoke soon after he set the car floor afire, and then tried to hack his way through the door with a penknife, he told police.

BRUNO DEFIES EVEN CHAIR TO 'BREAK' HIM

By International News Service.

Trenton, N. J., May 31—Nearing the day of his last-ditch fight from conviction for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, Bruno Richard Hauptmann is "the calmest person in state prison," according to a prison attache.

Hauptmann demonstrated his unusual composure earlier this week when he was visiteer by Mrs. Emma Gloeckner of Los Angeles, a sister whom he had not seen for years.

Mrs. Gloeckner wept hysterically at the sight of her brother. Hauptmann, dry-eyed and unruffled, blandly consoled her.

DOUBT IF HE CONFESSES

Hauptmann has proved a puzzle to prison authorities. Drawn more within himself than ever, he seems serenly resigned to whatever fate has in store for him.

Officials gave up hope of getting a confession out of him long ago and are convinced if and when he goes to the chair he will take with him the inside story of the crime of the century.

Strangely, Hauptmann, whose philosophy previously had no place for religion and recognized only "will power" and "strength," has become profoundly religious since he entered the death house on February 16.

KEEPS IN TRIM

He eagerly welcomes the weekly visits of the Rev. D. G. Werner, Bronx, N. Y., clergyman, and reads all the religious works he can obtain.

He is particularly anxious to get the book "Prophecies Speak," according to the minister.

While Hauptmann's every statement on his chances of winning his appeal on June 20 is optimistic, those in close touch with him believe he is not fooling himself and is prepared to die.

Keeper Mark A. Kimberling says he is a model prisoner, having never made any complaints or caused any trouble.

He said Hauptmann keeps in good physical trim with elaborate calisthenics in his cell. It has not been necessary for a doctor to see him since the day he went into the death house.

PLOT FOILED

To Bomb Colt Plant

Hartford, Ct., May 31 (AP)—A plot to blow up the Colt's Patent Firearms Manufacturing Company's plant here was disclosed by authorities today. Police made ready to ask warrants for the arrest of the gang involved.

The plot to wreck the factory was made known by State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn and County Detective Edward J. Hickey, after seven men were taken into custody by the police, four of them in connection with the bombing of the home of Samuel M. Stone, president of Colt's.

Farmer Hunted

Union, Me., May 31—Thomas G. Messer, a farmer who has been missing from his home, was the object of a widespread search in this section.

Whose Dad IS Our Dad?

MRS. MONGELLO

GERALD NORMA GLORIA

Police charge the father of these children is just a "two-timer" as a family man. Also calling him daddy are the two children of Mrs. Mary Gallo of Roxbury. Accused of bigamy in the case is John Mongello of Sagamore street, Lynn. This, authorities think, is his real wife, Mrs. Susie Mongello. The children are Gerald, three; Norma, two months, and Gloria, four. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Boston and Lynn detectives spent Memorial Day disentangling the marital affairs of John Gallo of Magnolia square, Roxbury.

Mrs. Mary Gallo, 21, reported to police that her husband had been missing a week.

When he left home, she said, he spoke of going to visit a John Mongello in Lynn. He often spoke of John Mongello as one of his best friends, she said.

And so police went to John Mongello's home in Sagamore street and found that the two not only were good friends but were, in fact, one and the same man.

John was not at home in Lynn. Mrs. Mongello had had him lodged in Salem jail for non-support. He also faces a Revere hit-and-run charge.

Police said he married the Lynn woman five years ago and has three children, and that four years ago he went through a ceremony with the Boston woman and has two children by her.

QUINCY GRANITE

Urged for Highway

Frank H. Foy, director of the National Emergency Council in Massachusetts, will present a petition bearing 30,000 signatures to federal officials in Washington today to urge that Quincy granite be used on the Quincy Adams grade crossing.

STRATO PLANES VEX EXPERTS

By Universal Service

Washington, May 31—Rapid progress toward stratosphere flying in the last year is playing an important part in deliberations of federal aviation experts as to whether land or sea planes are preferable for oceanic service.

Faced with necessity of advising post office authorities on what type of plane to require for trans-Pacific airmail service, the bureau of air commerce, it was learned, is attempting to determine how soon air traffic in the higher altitudes will be a reality.

Conceding and planes' superiority for stratosphere flights, officials weighing the problem are fearful that if they recommend sea planes for the oceanic route to China the equipment would be rendered unsuitable if high altitude flying is perfected.

BANQUET POISONS 150

Girl Reported Dying After Gala South Boston Fete; 7 in Hospital

Food poisoning sent 150 South Boston Yacht Club banqueters to City Hospital and to private physicians today, police reported.

Seven were held at the hospital after emergency treatments.

Miss Frances Mullen, 19, of D street, South Boston, may die, it was reported.

Others at the City Hospital are:

Fields, Harold, 30, of Welles avenue, Dorchester.

Hughes, Norman, 18, of Coleman street, Dorchester.

Mullen, Miss Margaret, 26, sister of the dying girl.

Norris, James, 28, of East 8th street, South Boston.

Stanton, Miss Helen, 29, of Forest Hills circle, Jamaica Plain.

Watson, Thomas J., 36, of Columbia road, Dorchester.

The epidemic of violent illness suddenly swept over the gathering of more than 300 men and women just at the height of festivities of "opening day."

First one, then another girl reported ill. Several men and more women began to suffer nausea and reported violent pains.

In a short time the entire company was decimated by half.

"Food poisoning" was given as the official diagnosis by City Hospital attendants. Ptomaine poisoning was a more familiar term, one official remarked.

By far the most serious of all the seven men and girls held at the hospital was Miss Frances Mullen.

The menu for the banquet, as reported by police, was composed of turkey, lobster, peas, potatoes, ice cream, demi-tasse and ale.

NORMANDIE Escapes Fog

Aboard S.S. Normandie, at Sea, May 31 (US)—Shaking herself clear of a fog, the Normandie today was averaging 29.50 knots. The weather cleared and the sea was smooth when the giant vessel stepped up her speed.

On the record run of the Rex, the average was 28.92 knots and the best day's speed was 29.61 knots.

10-YEAR ALUMNI Plan B. U. Fetes

Ten-year alumni of Boston University are planning a group of college get-together in connection with the annual Alumni Day program, Saturday, June 8, at Nickerson Field, Riverside.

The liberal arts class of '25 will hold a nautical luncheon and yachting party the same afternoon on Long Wharf, to be followed by a sail around Boston Harbor.

FATHER JOINS Girl in Death

Pioneer, La., May 31—Apparently distracted by the fatal, accidental wounding of his young daughter with a shotgun, Will Centers, 30, a farmer, picked up the gun and fired a fatal charge through his heart.

The little girl was shot and killed as the gun exploded while she was carrying it into the house from the porch where her father had left it on his return from a hunt.

HEARST TROPHY AWARDED IN GLOUCESTER

Gloucester, May 31—To the Gloucester High school rifle team, New England champions in the junior division, the William Randolph Hearst rifle trophy was presented today.

The Gloucester sharpshooters scored 949 points out of a possible 1000 in the national shoot in Washington in March, even bettering the mark of 892 set up by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology riflemen in the senior division.

Austen Lake, representing the Boston Evening American, made the presentation of the trophy and the presentations of individual medals to the Gloucester team members.

They are Colonel Allen J. Sutherland, Major Frederick J. Nally, captain, Lieutenant-Colonel John C. Alexander, Lieutenant George V. Green and Sergeant William S. McLaughlin.

MESSAGE FROM MR. HEARST

Presentations were made at the annual field day exercises of the school, which included parades.

The following message from William Randolph Hearst was read in connection with the rifle team presentations:

"A nation like the United States, subjected to the envy and jealousy of a hostile and insufficiently civilized world should be able to defend itself against some outbreak of this latent hostility into attack.

"A democratic nation does not want a large standing army, and the only effective alternative is a competent citizen soldiery. Military training for the young men of the nation in schools and colleges was favored by the founders of the republic, but unfortunately this plan is not in general operation.

NATION'S BEST DEFENSE

"The best best plan for national defense is to instruct the youth of the land by other means in the rudiments of military training. The object of the annual rifle shoot is to make skillful marksmen of as many young Americans as possible and so contribute in this important manner toward the defense of the country through an efficient citizen soldiery.

"The trophy is being awarded, therefore, not merely to the winners of an ordinary contest of skill, but to the young Americans who have most effectively cultivated their mental and physical gifts toward the possible defense of their country in time of danger.

"It is being presented not merely to good marksmen but to good citizens, to the young men whose love of country leads them to prepare for patriotic duty.

"None of all the people in America wants war, but some have the vision to see that war may be forced upon us and the patriotism to prepare for that emergency."

FLOOD KILLS 3 In Colorado Hills

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 31 (INS)—Three persons were known to be dead, six missing and property damage reached into millions of dollars today as flood waters poured over the banks of a score of streams on the east slope of the Colorado Rockies.

The dead were Mrs. A. E. Clark, Colorado Springs, struck by a floating house when she sought refuge on top of an automobile, and an unidentified man and woman swept from the top of their automobile.

HEAVY FOG Delays Shipping

A heavy fog that blanketed Boston harbor and the New England coast today delayed 10 of 12 vessels due here.

The two ships that arrived were the Belfast and the Penrith Castle, both from New York.

ITALY ORDERS 44,000 MORE TO MOBILIZE

By Associated Press

Rome, May 31—The Italian Government today announced the mobilization of 44,000 additional troops for service in East Africa, shortly after it had stated that Ethiopian officials had arrested Italian diplomatic couriers carrying mail to the Italian consulate at Gondar.

The new troops include one army division and two Fascist Blackshirt divisions.

At nearly the same time the Stefani News Agency stated that reports from Djibouti, French Somaliland, revealed a new Ethiopian incident.

CLUBBED BY SOLDIERS

The news agency said that, on May 18, a Czechoslovak mechanic named Heliga was attacked at Ghebi, Ethiopia, by a company of soldiers, who seriously injured him and one of his sons by heavy blows of their rifles, while the commanding officer watched without intervening.

The government communique said:

"The partial mobilization of Ethiopian forces and the arrival at Ethiopia of additional war materials requires us to adjust new defensive measures in order to guarantee the security of our East African colonies from any attack."

250,000 TROOPS IN ALL

The communique made the official statement that the forces mobilized for East Africa now are increased to four army divisions, or 80,000 men, four Blackshirt divisions, or 48,000 men, two native divisions, or 40,000 men—a total of 168,000.

Adding to this the number of workmen sent, the forces already in East Africa total around 225,000. Movement of two additional divisions, yet to be officially announced, will eventually bring the total of Italian forces in East Africa to more than 250,000 men.

'THAR SHE BLOWS' Whales Off Coast

Another "sea serpent" was reported today off George's bank—but this time it was only a school of whales.

A lookout on the Boston fishing schooner Geraldine and Phyllis saw the "serpent" rushing toward the ship. His cries brought the entire crew on deck, but they discovered it was only four or five whales.

BOARD SEEKS MILLION JOBS BY JULY 1

By Universal Service

Washington, May 31—Federal officials today had mapped an intensified work relief drive with the goal of putting at least a million unemployed back to work by July 1.

Beset during its first month by organization delays and problems, the administrative machinery set up by President Roosevelt is now ready to go ahead at full blast.

The works allotment board will meet Monday to approve a large batch of applications for new projects. The board already has recommended allotment of almost a third of the four billion dollar fund.

Determined to end direct relief by August 1, federal officials disclosed that works projects must be started in all states within the next month in order to take the unemployed off relief rolls.

Road building, grade crossing elimination, flood control and soil erosion work will be given preference, since plans have been completed for immediate work on such projects.

Construction of municipal projects also will be rushed to take care of the heavy relief load in the cities.

Fears that the collapse of NRA may result in increasing the ranks of unemployed have spurred administration leaders to speed up the clearance of applications for works projects already filed.

GIRL DANCER Dies in Leap

Nice, France, May 31 (AP)—Lubova Rostowa, 18-year-old dancer in the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, died today in a leap from her apartment window.

The girl was frightened as her father entered the room in the darkness and jumped to flee from what she apparently thought was an intruder.

Mlle. Rostowa is the wife of David Lichine, Hollywood dance director. They had been separated a year.

Fall Downstairs Fatal

Brockton, May 31—John Coughlin, 55, of Winter Chambers, Belmont street, died today of injuries received in a fall down the stairs in his home.

NEW CHAIN, Registered Letters

Another chain letter scheme was revealed today.

The chief feature of this variation is that the $1 is mailed in a registered letter and the receipt is handed back to the previous holders to assure them that the chain is unbroken.

The cost per person is 22 cents, instead of $1, but the seller disposes of his letter to five persons and mails the aggregate to the name at the top of the list.

HEARST STOCK 20TH DIVIDEND DECLARED

By Universal Service

San Francisco, May 31—Dividend Number 20 was added to the steadily growing record of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., when the board of directors authorized the regular quarterly cash payment of 43¾ cents per share on the Class "A" 7 per cent cumulative participating preferred shares.

The dividend was declared payable on June 15 to all stockholders of record as of June 1.

Indicative of an uptrend in business, total advertising volume for the ten Hearst consolidated newspapers and The American Weekly Magazine aggregated 22,735,267 lines in the first quarter of 1935.

This was an increase of 950,654 lines over the corresponding three months last year.

CIRCULATION GAINS

Likewise, Hearst consolidated's newspapers report a substantial gain in circulation for the six months ended March 31, 1935. Sunday circulation for that period increased 123,125 copies, while daily circulation of 2,474,375 was up 113,329.

Total net paid Sunday subscribers amounted to 1,886,565, which includes the combined circulation of the Los Angeles Examiner, San Francisco Examiner, Detroit Times, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

The American Weekly Magazine's Sunday circulation has now reached the highest peak since 1929, totalling 5,969,924 subscribers and a gain of 199,858.

SUNDAY PAPERS GAIN

Sunday circulation of the five Hearst Consolidated Newspapers averaged 142,548 more copies during the six months ended March 31, 1935, than for the corresponding six months ended March 31, 1930.

Hearst Consolidated also owns the New York Evening Journal, Chicago Evening American, Los Angeles Herald-Express, San Francisco Call-Bulletin and Oakland Post Enquirer.

N. Y. Journal to Pay $129,687 Bond Interest

San Francisco, May 31 (US)—The New York Evening Journal, a subsidiary of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., will distribute tomorrow $129,687 semi-annual interest on the company's outstanding issue of 6¼ per cent serial bonds.

The New York Evening Journal has retired annually on each December 1, a block of $1,000,000 serial maturities and has now outstanding only $4,150,000 bonds out of the original issue of $15,000,000.

CRASH TRAPS Holdup Suspects

Brockton, May 31—Arrested after an automobile accident, one Brockton youth today was charged with armed robbery and another is in jail awaiting a similar charge.

Robert Hill, 20, of Oakland street, was arraigned in district court for holding up and attacking Harry Thibeault, 53, in his Green street store Tuesday night.

Clarence Bishop, 21, of Linden street, driver of the crash auto, was sentenced to three months in jail. Police, however, charge he was with Hill in the robbery, and other charges are to be brought against him.

STOLEN GEM Ringleaders Hunted

New York, May 31 (INS)—Federal agents today were reported seeking six "key" figures in hope of smashing the $12,000,000-a-year racket in stolen gems as a result of information given a federal grand jury by secret witnesses.

The most startling arrest thus far is that of Noel Scaffa, private detective, held under $10,000 bond charged with violating federal law concerning interstate transportation of stolen gems, although he has not been indicted.

Georgetown, British Guiana, May 31—Two fugitives from Devil's Island, who reached here a month ago after a daring escape, were placed aboard a ship today and sent back to the French penal colony.

ASK AUTOS FOR CHILD OUTING

Once again, this year on June 13, the automobile dealers of Boston, will hold an outing at Lake Pearl, Wrentham, for 2500 underprivileged children—but more cars than the philanthrophic automobiles men can furnish are needed.

In the past years the public have come to the aid of the sponsors generously and today they appealed again to the big-hearted to donate the use of their machines for the day, which furnishes the orphans, cripples and other luckless youngsters a bright ray each year.

The automobile dealers dig down in their pockets to buy box lunches, ice cream, tonic and the rest under the plan begun 28 years ago by the late Chester I. Campbell.

More cars are needed, however, and the big-hearted owners may aid the party by communicating with Albert Rau at Hancock 8996.

AMERICAN COMMUNIST HEARS DESPAIRING CRY FOR BREAD AS HE ENTERS SOVIET 'UTOPIA'

Andrew Smith's Own Story of 3 Years in Red 'Workers' Paradise'

ARTICLE THREE
By Andrew Smith

The journey from the border to Moscow took me along exactly the same route I had traveled in 1929 as a "distinguished visitor." But how different everything looked with the window-dressing stripped, with the "cardboard villages" removed!

The impression which I had received of a land of milk and honey for workers vanished, and instead of a land of sackcloth and ashes unfolded itself before our eyes.

As in 1929, I was a member of a group of workers. On that occasion the group was an official delegation.

Now it was a group of pioneers, eagerly awaiting the warm, outstretched arms of the workers' motherland which I had promised them.

Instead we were received by the cold, bony hands of hunger and fear.

Still a Loyal Communist

What had happened? Was I no longer a workingman because I was not an official delegate? Had my political status changed?

No, I was as much of a loyal Communist as ever. My comrades were all picked workingmen devoted to the Communist ideal.

I sensed an unspeakable tragedy being enacted in the land of my dreams, the tragedy of the abyss dividing the man in power from the people, the official from the citizen, the master from his underling.

Was it possible that a new class of usurpers, camouflaged as workers, wearing the insignia of the Hammer and Sickle, had captured power in Russia and betrayed the people? Perish the thought!

The train that was to take us to Leningrad pulled in. We were assigned a corner in a bare third-class car lined with wooden bunks. How unlike the car that took me to Leningrad in 1929! We were called to the customs office before boarding the train. The inspectors insisted that I empty my tightly-packed trunk and place all the contents right there in the mud.

I observed that the other members of the group had a perfunctory examination and their baggage was stamped without ado, and asked Knotex how they did it.

"Well, why didn't you give me a couple of dollars, as we did?" he countered.

"I thought we were in a workers' country and did not wish to offer a tip to an official," I murmured, trying to conceal a feeling of shame.

After distributing nearly $5000 of my savings to the Communist organizations in America, I arrived in Russia with only $175. I decided to exchange $100 into Russian rubles, and at Belo-Ostrov received in return 197 rubles and a receipt.

"By showing this receipt," the official explained to me, "you may buy things at the Torgsin stores."

This chain of stores, operated by the government, sells goods only for foreign currency or gold. Three weeks later, when I produced the receipt at the Moscow Torgsin, I was told that it was invalid because the order under which it had been issued was cancelled.

His $100 Now Worth $2

As the ruble was worth about one cent in the open market in purchasing power, my $100 dwindled to about $2.

On the way to Leningrad, ragged and haggard peasants boarded our train. They carried either heavy bundles wrapped in filthy rags or rusty battered milk cans. They were all laborers on collective or state farms. They were smuggling potatoes and other produce from their villages to Leningrad to barter for bread.

"You see," they explained in answer to our questions, "they take everything away from us, and we have no bread. We will beg for help, for bread on the streets of Leningrad. Perhaps some of the city folks will take pity on us."

I tried to argue with them, filled as I still was with Soviet propaganda, and asked:

"Is it not true that your troubles are due to your laziness, that you do not want to work?"

"Do you think it is easy for me to carry my baby in one arm and drag these heavy bundles with the other?" retorted a gaunt peasant woman. "We are hard-working people. All we want is enough to eat for our children and ourselves. It was different before. We had enough. We did not have to go to Leningrad to beg for a crust of bread."

The peasants broke out in denunciations of the government. They cursed their despoilers. "You will probably have it better than we," they warned us, "but you will find out soon enough how we live and what an unhappy country is ours."

At every station our train was besieged by throngs of women and children crying, "Khliebushka, Khliebushka! Dai kopecku!" (A little bread, a little bread! Give us a penny!)

This was the refrain which greeted us in Leningrad, instead of the strains of the Internationale which welcomed me in 1929. The mass of ragged women and children, begging for help, was our reception committee. Around the station people, dirty and frost bitten, were lined about in a terrible state of neglect.

Just Dirt and Vermin

We had paid $5 per day in advance to the Intourist (Soviet Travel Agency) for hotel accommodations and board. I was having visions of the Hotel Europe where I had stopped before as a member of the delegation, and which I had been told was reserved for workers.

But we were taken to a third-class hostelry, the type which charges 25 cents a night in the United States. We had bare steel beds badly infected with vermin. The linen had not been changed. We received no towels. We could not get near the only two tubs in the hotel. We washed in a common wash-room with cold water and without soap.

In the Hotel Europe, I remembered, they had changed sheets daily. Our table there had been an unforgettable testimonial to Soviet abundance.

Now our breakfasts consisted of tea, black bread, and stale fish or cheese.

Our dinners were either tasteless beet or cabbage soup, plus a "cutlet" and a dessert of dried fruit.

The "cutlet" was composed of decayed meat and a large portion of sour black bread. Several times I was compelled to return my dishes which had evidently not been washed.

As a loyal Communist, I felt responsible to the group and blamed the management for our treatment. I complained bitterly to the officials of the Intourist.

"This is not America for you," they declared. "This is our system. We can't help it."

But when it came to arranging for the shipment of our baggage to Moscow, Soviet rubles would not be accepted in payment. Only American dollars were wanted! Some members of our group had to pay as much as $20 to get their baggage on the train.

We had looked forward to a sight-seeing tour in Leningrad, the cradle of the revolution. I had painted the glories of the Soviet institutions with a generous brush on the way to Russia. Now we had no more stomach for such sights. We wanted to get to Moscow.

Andrew Smith will tell more about his experience in Soviet Russia, in succeeding, highly illuminating articles to be published in these columns.

SCIENCE AIDS CHILDLESS COUPLE

WOMAN TO BE MOTHER SOON

By Associated Press

Madison, Wis., May 31—A zoologist and two physicians of the University of Wisconsin today disclosed success of experiments which they said pointed a way to motherhood for any woman hitherto childless through misfortunes of nature.

The results will be reported to national medical meetings in June.

The use of a pituitary hormone extract to achieve a natural pregnancy in a 35-year-old woman previously thought to be sterile was described by Drs. Ralph E. Campbell and Elmer L. Severinghaus of the Wisconsin Medical School.

They collaborated with Dr. Frederick L. Hisaw, a leader in research in the hormones of reproduction.

At the same time, the three scientists described hormone injections which they said had eased severe periodic pains suffered by some women because of a functional disorder.

The physicians withheld the name of a woman who they said will soon become a mother through success of their work.

Childless through 15 years, the couple had sought aid of several physicians. A special examination revealed inactive glands for which the researchers planned and administered the hormone treatments.

The physicians said that the use of the injections was limited to instances in which sterility was traceable to a few types of functional disorders.

"On the basis of limited clinical experiences with humans," they said in a joint statement, "we believe that some of the pituitary hormones may prove effective in overcoming any cases of sterility."

The hormones are body substances which have been extracted by chemists. Their existence has been known for years, but not all their properties are known.

Dr. Hisaw, who has been working upon hormone research for several years, will join the zoology staff of Harvard University after the present semester.

WHY WE MAKE THIS MOTOR FUEL

Better than you need

OUR FRIENDS occasionally ask us why we make ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH PLUS better than is necessary for ordinary driving. Here is what we tell them:

1. ATLANTIC'S policy for 70 years has been to make the finest products we know how, and offer them at the lowest possible prices. 2. We believe this is simply "good business." It creates a large sales volume, which in turn allows us to give better and still better values to our customers.

The Fuel with Many PLUS Qualities

Just take the case of the original ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH. When it was first introduced, this fuel created a sensation because it was so far in advance of its time. But ATLANTIC was not satisfied to rest on that achievement alone. We made improvement after improvement . . . anticipating the radical changes which were being made in automobile engines . . . and finally we added the word PLUS to the motor fuel's name to indicate its new PLUS qualities.

Today's ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH PLUS, for instance, has enough power to take you more than 200 miles an hour, when cars are built to go that fast and still stay on the ground. Its anti-knock rating exceeds the requirements of most cars on the road.

Yes, this fuel is better than you need . . . which is another way of saying that it gives you more for your money. Fill your tank today, and discover the full Power, Performance and Economy that the manufacturer built into your car.

No business can long endure without true service to its customers. We believe that ATLANTIC'S steady growth over 70 years reflects the extra quality which we constantly strive to put in our products. * * * We think of ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH PLUS as something more than "just gasoline." It must definitely be the best . . . so as to meet the emergencies of life, as well as to give dependable and inexpensive service in every-day use.

ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH PLUS for warm-weather driving

Pope Pius, 78, Holds No Fete

By Associated Press.

Vatican City, May 31—Pope Pius reached his 78th birthday today, but did not let the anniversary disturb his normal routine.

He said a low mass of thanksgiving early this morning in his private chapel, assisted by two monsignors, his secretaries.

Few persons were admitted to the chapel—a handful of members of the papal court and several relatives.

After the mass, he began his usual busy day.

Those who arrived for audiences with the Holy Father found the yellow and white papal flags flying from the principal buildings of the Vatican, and the Swiss guards and Vatican gendarmes in full dress uniform. Their audiences, nevertheless, were granted as if a birthday were an everyday occurrence.

Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, took much more notice of the Pope's birthday than did the pontiff. It was Pacelli's duty to acknowledge the heaps of telegrams of felicitation that arrived from every part of the world, many from crowned heads.

American prelates who have seen the Pope recently say he is in fine physical condition.

His holiness spares himself little. He works nearly as hard as when he was elected to the throne of St. Peter 13 years ago.

Nevertheless, he no longer takes long walks in the Vatican gardens, but prefers an automobile.

Holiday Horse Show at Dedham Is Fashionable Event

By BETTY ALDEN

EVER SINCE THAT mythical charioteer, Aurora, drove her eerie steeds across the skies, the gods have smiled upon events in which horses are the center attraction . . . Yesterday was no exception, for they withheld the threatening showers and stormy weather so that society could enjoy the annual holiday horse show at the Dedham Polo and Country Club . . . Incidentally, when one arrives at the summit of the hill upon which the club is situated, he realizes that nothing less than a smile of the gods could have created the panorama of rolling green hills which stretch out below the polo field where the horse shows are held . . .

OLIVIA MORGAN

It is well worth the trip out to Dedham just to enjoy the typical New England countryside setting of the Club, with its rambling white stables nestling comfortably in the distant valley, at the foot of the rolling sweep of smooth green fairway . . . Yesterday the quiet rural scene was enlivened by the presence of hundreds of spectators who gathered to watch the keen competition to win the blue ribbons and silver trophies, donated by famous horsemen and women of the social world . . .

Smart Set Attends

BEACON HILL celebrities were out en masse, arrayed in their gayest summer finery, for what better way is there to display one's toggery, than by strolling around the paddock, visiting neighbors' boxes, and leaning for a while on the rail? . . .

Truly the "royal" boxes were at one end of the gallery where Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., and various members of the distinguished Bird clan gathered from time to time . . .

The Birds' interest in competition between fine thoroughbreds is quite evident, and though no member of the older generation of the family exhibited entries yesterday there were several entries in the children's classes . . . Mrs. Francis W. Bird, with her daughter, Anna, and Mrs. Frank Bonsal, granddaughter of Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, were all present, with Mr. and Mrs. Reginald W. Bird taking a deep interest in the procedure since their Waveney Farm, in Framingham Center, will be the setting for the Millwood Hunt show next week . . .

Mr. Bird's son-in-law and daughter, the William O. Clarks, watched the show from the embankment which forms a natural gallery on one side of the field . . . the pale apricot of Mrs. Clark's tailored frock blended with the amethyst linen which graced the tall slim figure of Connie Bader, who was a neighboring spectator . . .

Very debonair and individual were the checked taffeta frocks of May Bryant and her sister, Mrs. Edward Hamlin, Jr., who attended with her doctor husband . . .

Barbara McKissock and Olivia Morgan were an attractive pair of debutante railbirds . . . with Mary Hastings, Mary Morison, Isabel Lawrence, Martha Chapin and Betty Everts all peering at the horses in the paddock . . .

• • •

Madeleine Erhard in Navy Blue

MADELEINE ERHARD perched herself on the fence, with her fiance's shoulder supporting most of her weight . . . Her tucky navy blue dress with long white coat of linen to match must be destined for a place in that trousseau which must be ready by June 22 . . .

Martha Bird is usually sighted by her red curls but it was her canary yellow felt which attracted the eye yesterday . . . Mrs. Hamilton Osgood, 2d, was, as usual, one of the most attractive younger matrons, wearing an all white costume . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Appleton Harding and Leslie Blake added to their summer tans by sitting in the sun all morning as the parade of blue-blooded horses passed by the paddock gate . . .

No one was gayer than Mrs. Josiah Child, whose husband covered himself with glory while she watched from the rail . . . Her dress, too, of daffodil yellow, reflected something of her happy spirit . . . and no one was more excited at the ditch jump for hunters, than Mrs. Richard Thorndike, who wore a plain white dress with a striped belt matching the striped band on her white hat . . .

• • •

Past Debutantes Attend

MARTHA ENDICOTT and Elise Russell couldn't keep away from the ditch where there were several "thrilling" mishaps . . . Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wrenn and Miss Charlotte Valentine, the Francis V. Cranes and Isabella Grandin were others who dotted the outside course for the hunting classes . . .

A bright spot among so many whites was Mrs. Richard Saltonstall's turquoise blue and canary yellow ensemble . . . Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Thayer, added to the social atmosphere by their presence . . . Virginia Tolman and Lee Marston, Mrs. William B. Rice, Mrs. Edward Pinkerton in pale yellow. Eleanor Williams, Mary McElwain Gleason, Frances McElwain, Mr. and Mrs. R. Cushing Hamlen, Dorothy West, Eleanor Claflin in a cocoa brown jacket dress, ex-Governor and Mrs. Frank G. Allen, Lucy Stone, Mrs. Bob Almy, Mrs. Richard C. Storey, Mrs. Amor Hollingsworth, Barbara Letts and Shirley Knowles from Providence, Mrs. Van Ness Bates, Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Jr., and others equally important socially, too numerous to mention, all enjoyed the happy day in the open . . .

Miss Sylvia Warren of River Bend, Dover, won the cup donated by the 110th Cavalry Horse Show, for winning the greatest number of points during the day . . .

This Is Life
by ROBERT E. ROGERS

Is there any real reason, except a tradition which is little more than a habit, why Memorial Day should not be celebrated on a Sunday—say, the Sunday nearest to May 30?

I see no reason. It is true that back in the days when the G. A. R. was an organization strong in numbers and youthful in vigor, General Logan—was it not?—established the present day for the annual decoration of the soldiers' graves. How or why he picked that day I do not know. It has always served admirably, although I have always liked it best when spring was late and the lilacs were in bloom. To me lilacs are the Decoration Day flower, par excellence.

R. E. Rogers

But when the day comes in the middle of the week it is a dreadful temptation for a young veteran with a wife and children to give them a holiday rather than spend the best half of it marching to the cemetery. In the older days there were few places to go to on a holiday and no easy ways to get there. Today nearly everyone has a car and the world lies open before you. You can't blame the veterans for stealing away.

Strictly speaking, I suppose, those World War veterans who are always making such a row about saluting the flag and taking native attitudes and getting the bonus right away ought to be logical and consistent enough to turn out at the Memorial Day exercises one hundred per cent strong. It doesn't look so well in a city of one hundred thousand to see a Memorial Day parade stretched out to a reasonable length only by the addition of companies of small boys and girls, infants' drum corps, troops of boy scouts and even a few girl scouts, not to mention bands and the National Guard, with a rather thin sandwich of Legionnaires between the thick slices of youthful auxiliaries.

Day Taken Over

I suppose the Legion officers feel worse than I do at the slim representation of the men who have taken over this day from the G. A. R. and who now claim it as their own. A Sunday observance of Memorial Day might solve the problem. A little more discipline within the Legion might solve it too. If Rotary can compel attendance, why not the Legion?

I am not at all in favor of the modern suggestion that all holidays be celebrated on Monday, for instance thus giving a long week-end. There are certain dates which are of such historical or religious value that the very spirit of the day is a part of the date. The Fourth of July, for example, Washington's birthday, Christmas Day. One cannot imagine them being arbitrarily assigned to some scheme invented for the convenience of either workers or employers.

Armistice Day, to this generation at least, is too closely associated with that fateful 11th hour of the 11th day of November to be changed. But Columbus Day, so far as by passers are concerned here in Massachusetts, is just an artificial nuisance, of little significance except for the pumped-up variety. Here in the old Bay Colony we should do much better to celebrate the date of the signing of the Mayflower compact of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth. The discovery of the West Indies has really very little significance for us.

I confess that I should like Easter Day stabilized to match the vernal equinox, that the religious and the astronomical New Year's Day of spring might coincide. But traditions of two religions going back many hundreds of years are perhaps too serious to be reformed.

Obviously, then, any sweeping proposals to put all holidays at week-ends will not work. After all, there are certain observances that are more important than another day of loafing for the workingman or another day of trading for the business man. Memorial Day is one of these. Thanksgiving Day is another. I see no reason why both of them should not be permanently set for Sunday.

After all neither of them is an anniversary of any particular event. And both of them suffer badly in their observance from the commercialized sport and entertainment. So long as the commercialization exists it is only human nature to make them holidays instead of holy days. Here in Massachusetts, I hope, we would not go to horse or automobile races nor to baseball or football games on Sunday. Even an enforced piety may be better for a careless and irresponsible generation than none at all.

So long as the last veteran of the Civil War lives we may well keep General Logan's old date. Then the Legion takes over Memorial Day. Why not consider seriously a change of date which will restore the occasion to its old significance, a day of observance, not of celebration, and certainly not of recreation and commercialized amusement?

Oil FOR THE LAMPS of CHINA

By ALICE TISDALE HOBART

Hester Rejoins Stephen

CHAPTER 31

(This is a serialization of the Cosmopolitan production released by Warner Brothers.)

"Is that their justification?" Stephen spoke coldly, thinking with distaste of the way the boss' words had been turned to suit the purpose of the company. Now he remembered the boss, on his 50th birthday, receiving the homage of the agents.

Think of him, sub-station manager here, where he had been so honored, all these agents witnessing his demotion!

It was such a loss of face, he mused to himself, as would wreck a man before the Chinese.

Stephen felt disgust for the company, that it should bring such humiliation on any of its men, and on the boss of all men.

"Anyway, I don't know that I'll come back," he said to Kendall.

That night, the last night of his stay in the town, Stephen had dinner with the boss. Until then he had felt for him nothing except sympathy and the greatest respect but, before the evening was over, he began to wonder if he had overvalued this garrulous old man.

He had remembered the boss as reserved, but here he was divulging all sorts of personal matters in an effort to explain the godown affair.

And then he boasted that he wouldn't give the company the satisfaction it would get if he resigned. "That's what they're trying to force me to do," he said. "But they'll pay my pension. I'll show them they can't get the best of me like that."

Leaving Manchuria

Try as he would, Stephen felt reaction in favor of the company, and a withdrawal of his spirit from the bragging old man—for old, the boss suddenly seemed.

Still he could not have stood it to have the boss under him. He was glad that it was impossible for him to come back to Manchuria.

The train was pulling out from the town that for five years had been the center of Stephen's interests. In a few hours now Manchuria would be for him a thing of the past.

He knew that he would be given something good in another part of China if he wished it; and he kept his man's right to choose where he should go, and he had not allowed them to put him over the boss.

Hang it all! Why hadn't the boss kept step with the company?

The town had faded into the plain; now the lights of the express blotted out the plain.

Five years, and yet no single relationship with this country remained. Kin had decided not to come back to China. Evea Li Tsu was no longer his. He had given the little dog to Kin.

* * *

As the steamer sailed out of the harbor at Yokohama the steady strong vibration of machinery that five years ago had been too commonplace for Stephen to notice, now excited him incredibly.

When he went below for dinner and saw fresh green things to eat, he felt like a boy in a fairy tale sitting down to a banquet brought by rubbing Aladdin's lamp.

The starved cells of his body cried out for this green food after the monotonous diet of the Winter plains, and he ate ravenously, wolfing the celery and the lettuce.

Then, suddenly conscious of the others at the table, tourists, he felt humiliated that the poverty of his exile had betrayed him into this greedy hunger.

He found himself talking, the starved cells of his mind crying out for companionship. Then, suddenly conscious, he retreated into stiff silence. He seemed never able to be casual.

But bit by bit, as Western civilization took shape before him, he accommodated himself to it, although many of the ways of his own people were still strange to him when the ship drew into San Francisco three weeks later.

All the long journey across the continent his brain held tenaciously the image of the ancient civilization, into which for five years he had been trying to fit himself, in order that he might change it.

Hester at Grill

The train pulled into the terminal at New York, its network of tracks stretching away on every side, not just one thin track as in the stations of Manchuria.

He was the first on the platform, the first hurrying toward the exit. Beyond the iron grill of the gate stood Hester. Was it only her modish apparel that was different? Was she still the aloof gay Hester of their last days together?

The great station vaulted above them. Sunshine fell in a pattern over the marble floor. As in a trance Stephen felt himself, Hester clinging to his arm, caught up into the stream of well-dressed men and women, moving forward toward the entrance.

Then at last they were in their room at the hotel, and he was clasping Hester in a long embrace, trying to bind himself into that intimacy so suddenly snapped the night of their mutual grief.

But Hester broke the embrace. "Your mother is very frail," she said. "You'll see when you get home."

He did see. His mother old and delicate constantly importuning him to remain in America. Hester, still not wholly recovered, silently waging the same battle. He felt himself intimidated by their imperious frailty.

"It isn't just that I mi nt to go back," he told himself. "Suppose I do stay here, how shall I take care of them? Mother's extravagant and Hester's used now to the ease of the rich. Kin and Amah have taken care of her so long, she's forgotten how much you have to do for yourself in America."

He would have to start in at the bottom here. When he had said to one or two old friends that he was thinking of staying at home, immediately he had lost standing with them.

They discounted the value of his foreign experience, so far as business in America was concerned; made him feel that he would be at a disadvantage starting in now.

But when he mentioned his position abroad, then he had prestige among them. "You're lucky, Steve," they said. "Look how we slave."

On their return to New York, Mr. Swaley asked to see Stephen's wife. Passing through the door of the great building, Hester whispered:

"I feel so small. As if nothing that happened to us could be of any real importance; the way you'd feel—well—if you jumped into Niagara."

Stephen hardly noticed what she was saying, wondering why the director had asked him to bring Hester.

Gauzy Cottons for Young Fashionables

By ANNICE BRINK

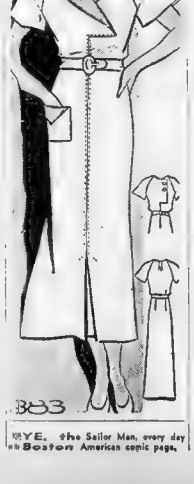

IF YOU have a very young lady in your home, you've probably seen some pretty exhibitions of fashion-consciousness . . . particularly since La Temple arrived on the screen. It's a thing child psychologists encourage today (barring self-centered vanity). Though certainly no one needs their encouragement to purchase the fashions of the young arbiter, such as this checked batiste with hankie lawn jacket, which comes in bright blue, red or brown. Ruffle sleeves on the frock help the jacket sleeves keep their perkiness. Or the white hankie lawn with letters of the alphabet, in colorful embroidery, scattered all over. Flat box pleats form the yoke and sleeves. Sizes are from three to six, and cost is under two dollars! For information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

To Hold Rally

More than 1000 Girl Scouts will gather at the Dedham Country and Polo Club Saturday for a play which will climax the year's program.

MORNING FROCK

Clever Color Contrast

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9383

You step right into your morning when you wear this chic little house number.

Its trim, neat lines inspire you!

Raglan sleeves flatter every woman and the broad lapels and pocket flap offer some clever possibilities in color contrast.

There's plenty of freedom with that kick pleat in the skirt.

Make it up in sturdy cotton to resist hard wear—a print or monotone would be equally good.

Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart included.

Pattern 9383 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards 36-inch fabric and ½ yard contrasting.

The Strait-Jacket Bid

A bidding system is most effective when every bid in its catalogue furnishes a precise inference.

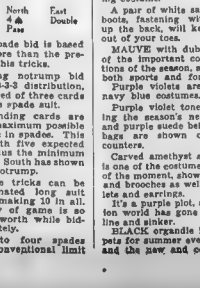

The more exact the information given by each bid, the easier it becomes for each player to estimate the number of tricks his side can win.

The new requirements for opening notrump bids are very valuable because of the distinct and clear information that every notrump bid gives.

The distribution as well as the honor-trick strength of the hand are portrayed beyond the slightest doubt. This leads to the bidding of many games which prior to 1935 were not easily biddable.

South, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	4 ♠	Double
Pass	Pass

North's four spade bid is based upon nothing more than the precise counting of his tricks.

South's opening notrump bid guarantees a 4-3-3-3 distribution, so North is assured of three cards in support of the spade suit.

If the outstanding cards are divided 2-1 the maximum possible loss is two tricks in spades. This leaves North with five expected spade winners plus the minimum of 4 honor-tricks South has shown by bidding on notrump.

To these nine tricks can be added an estimated long suit trick in hearts, making 10 in all.

The possibility of game is so good that it is worth while bidding it immediately.

In jumping to four spades North uses a conventional limit bid. The jump to game in a major over an opening notrump bid warns partner that there is no possibility of a Slam so it can be made on hands such as this one without causing partner to become unduly optimistic.

Usually a game bid of this type shows about 1-plus honor-tricks and a six-card or longer suit.

With a seven-card suit and freak distribution, North is incorrect in dispensing with the honor-trick requirement.

The abruptness of the bidding left East up in the air. He had a very powerful hand but no available bid.

At worst, however, he expected to win one trick in clubs and the heart Ace in addition to his trump tricks.

On the chance that one or two more tricks might be picked up elsewhere, East doubled.

The opening lead was the King of spades and East then shifted to the King of clubs. But the hand was a lay-down. North had only to cash his two minor suit Aces and then give up a trick to the Ace of hearts.

Since only two rounds of spades needed to be led, North was able to ruff his last heart with South's remaining five so it was not even necessary for him to find a 3-3 heart division or take the diamond finesse or give up the Jack of clubs by ruffing Dummy's two small clubs.

It is likely that except for the immediate jump to game on North's part the hand might have been passed out at a contract of two or three spades.

Fashion Flashes

A SLEEVELESS beach dress, designed to slip on over a wet swim suit, is a knockout. It is bound in natural color hemp, buttons down the front with unpainted wooden buttons secured with hemp cord, and is guaranteed not to bag or bulge even when you sit down in it with a wet bathing suit beneath.

Denim slacks, like workmen's overalls, also are well up in the beach parade. And there are denim windbreakers to match that have no useless gadgets and are endorsed as a sensible sailing costume.

A pair of white sailcloth beach boots, fastening with a zipper up the back, will keep the sand out of your toes.

MAUVE with dubonnet is one of the important color combinations of the season, and is seen in both sports and formal wear.

Purple violets are worn with navy blue costumes.

Purple violet tones are invading the season's newest tweeds, and purple suede belts and handbags are shown on accessory counters.

Carved amethyst set in crystal is one of the costume jewelry pets of the moment, shown in big clips and brooches as well as in bracelets and earrings.

It's a purple plot, and the fashion world has gone for it, hook, line and sinker.

BLACK organdie is one of the pets for summer evening dresses, and the new and colorful Swiss organdies, with felt-like coin dots and cartwheels, are among the newest notes of the season.

Sheer woolens, that look like dull-surface silks and tailor like nobody's business, are being shown in piece-goods departments about town, in summery pastel shades, for shirtmaker frocks and hot-weather suits.

Cire organdies make fashion headlines of the moment, looking like lacquered gauze, and adding sparkle to the spring scene. They are used principally in dinner and evening gowns, in black or navy.

MAUVE accessories are shown with canary yellow and white outfits. Amethyst has taken a new lease on life in the jewelry world, and is making its appearance in new bracelets, clips, pins and fobs.

Violet is especially sponsored for sportswear this season, being seen in knitted suits and sweaters, in tub-silk shirtwaist frocks, in linen jackets and matching accessories.

AUSTRIAN flower print and suspender dresses bloom in some of the smartest shop windows. There's a definite tyrolean movement for active sports clothes again this summer, especially in the longer shorts and the embroidered suspenders.

They're even making summer dance frocks of Tahitian prints, and also of the kind of Indian prints that used to be used for bedspreads and wall hangings in Greenwich Village apartments.

Given in Marriage

CHAPTER 358

"THAT SYMPATHY thing is a queer racket," Lillian went on, ignoring, or not seeing, the stunned horror with which I was regarding her.

The warning she had given me—not to betray so much anxiety for Hugh Grantland—had brought my house crashing about my ears.

I had built up so carefully the edifice of friendship for Hugh and comradeship with him, keeping always in the background of even my own soul the knowledge that he loved me hopelessly, chivalrously, asking nothing in return, that until "he showed me my error I had not realized how much his comradeship and the knowledge of his devotion was meaning to me.

She had spoken correctly in saying that I did not care for him in the way I cared for my husband, but, as if her words had been a light illuminating the secret places of my soul, I saw in those deep recesses memories, impulses, that I knew I should be loath to have Dicky know.

I realized something also, searching my own soul all the more pitilessly because Lillian had now averted her eyes from mine and pretended to be absorbed in arranging her gown; I knew that if I had discovered in Dicky the same warm, sympathetic emotion for some woman that I unconsciously had been sending out to Hugh, I should have been furiously jealous.

FANCIED DISLOYALTY

I must have made some sound—must have uttered a little moan or groan indicative of my complete abasement—for Lillian suddenly turned upon me tigerishly, and, taking me by the shoulders shook me as she might a refractory child.

"Stop it! Stop it, I tell you!" she commanded. "Don't tell me I have been mistaken in you all these years, and that there's a length of rubber hose down your back instead of vertebrae. All I've done is to give you a little tip to mind your step, and you immediately descend the steps of Avernus as deeply as if you'd given Dicky cause for a trip to Reno. Snap out of it! No milk has been spilled, and if you don't start making a mountain out of a miserable little mole hill, there won't be. Now—having mixed my metaphors beyond all repair—will you come to your senses?"

Her crisp utterance, her coolly critical eyes were like streams of icy water played upon me. They brought me out to the sickly realms of fancied disloyalty to Dicky in which I had been wandering, and restored to me the "sense of which I stood had been bereft during the moments following Lillian's surprising strictures.

I straightened my drooping figure, threw back my head and faced her valiantly.

"I'm all right now, thanks to you," I said, "and you won't have to warn me again."

I tried to step away from her, but her hands still pinioned my arms.

"Yes, I shall," she said, "only in the opposite direction. Tell me the truth. Aren't you planning to treat Hugh, when next you see him, with the studied politeness you would use to a bishop or some other dignitary who had come to call—that is, supposing that we rate a bishop?"

She looked at me searchingly, and I crimsoned, for something faintly akin to her burlesqued suggestion had been in my mind.

"Aha! I knew it," she gloated. "I knew the old intuition hadn't gone back on me. Now, you listen to your Aunt Susan's words of wisdom—and heed 'em, dearie—for they come from a woman who's had lots of experience, more than she wishes she had."

There was a note of bitterness in her last words, and I remembered how much unhappiness her life had held before she and Harry Underwood had found their present haven—and heaven—in each other's companionship. But the next instant the saddened note had vanished, and there was again good-natured mockery investing the very sound advice she was giving me.

"If you suddenly change your manner to Hugh, especially when he is wounded and ill, you're going to have every cat in the house asking 'Why? Why? Why?' And you know as well as I do that we have two of the very miauwest—pipe that word, dearie—of all cats right on this very floor, ready to claw your eyes out if they are given the chance."

MANNERS

His Birthday Gift

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. After a young man has taken a girl to the movies or to some other entertainment, should she thank him? Every time?

2. Is it all right to accept money from him to go to the movies, if he is not able to take you, but is to meet you afterward? (I am not engaged to him.)

3. Should you always have the first and last dances with the man who takes you to a dance? Is this still true if, before the first dance, another man is introduced to you?

4. When a man says, "I am glad to have met you," please tell me what the girl should say?

5. When a man thanks a girl for a dance, what should she say?

Thank you.

1. Everyone, man, woman or child, should thank anyone who offers hospitality, anyone who extends an invitation, anyone who is kind and thoughtful in planning and in doing things. The words "Thank you" should be spent lavishly, not hoarded miserly. Not to express our appreciation of kindnesses and courtesies is to show at once and inevitably that we are not mannerly people, that we haven't the right human reactions to other human beings and to life. Make it a habit to say "Thank you"—it gives a lovely light!

2. No, you'd better pay your own way to the movies unless he goes with you.

3. Yes, the girl always is expected to have the first and last dances with the man who takes her to the dance. The fact that a man is introduced to her just before the first dance and asks her to dance with him, doesn't alter this. She should postpone this dance to one following.

4. When a person says to us, "I am glad to have met you," we thank him for this pleasant remark and indicate that we, too, are happy at the meeting: "Thank you. I am very glad to have met you, too," or "Thank you. It has been a great pleasure to meet you, too."

5. When a man thanks a girl for a dance, she says: "It was a delightful dance," or "I enjoyed that dance so much, Bob" . . . something like that.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

How Women Surmount Problems of Wounded Pride

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THOSE of us who live, or think we do, on a good, firm, granite foundation have a way of wondering how far-off human beings can contentedly dwell on the slope of a volcano or within the range of a possible earthquake.

Why is it that we don't waste time wondering how wives can peacefully live on—can even flourish and bloom and wear an air of satisfaction—when the catastrophe that the Other Woman can cause is just as likely to scatter destruction at any time and in any place as any Popocatepetl?

In the case of Jeannette C., who is still heartbreakingly young and who has two precious children, the worst of the catastrophes is over.

She has discovered the existence of the other woman; she has endured that shattering of her very universe, that tearing of her very vitals, that a trustful, loving woman can suffer only once. She has listened to the best case that her weak, remorseful husband could possibly make out for himself, and the stricken girl is considering what to do next. Meanwhile, she is asking my advice.

CRUEL DECEPTION

"It makes me so bitter," she writes, "to think what a deluded fool I was. I loved Robert so terribly, and he knew I did. I thought I was perfectly happy. But this cruel deception had been going on for a year. Besides, the girl was my friend. Can a woman ever forgive such a thing? Ought she to forgive it?

"But the question now is, what shall I do? I can easily get a divorce. The girl who has ruined my life wants me to, of course. My husband begs me not to, but can I believe anything he says?

"If I do go on, there certainly can be no more happiness for me. I know we should feel and see the cracks in our marriage all the time. The children would continue to have a home, it is true, but wouldn't it be a poisoned home, as mine would be a poisoned life?

"You know so much of women's problems, dear Miss Fairfax, do help me to make the wise decision, whatever it may cost me."

The best comfort I can give to Jeanette is to remind her that thousands of women every year meet—and surmount—this problem of crushed love, wounded pride and maternal anxiety. The merest glance at my correspondence would convince her that her very pitiful case is far from exceptional.

FORGIVE, FORGET

As for her next step, I do not recommend divorce. Human nature is very frail. We can't judge a man's conduct fairly, when we are suffering as keenly as Jeanette is now suffering, from the results of it. If she will only try not to think of this husband of hers as a monster!

The bond between them is so much stronger than that between him and the conscienceless other girl, that I urge Jeanette to give her marriage a chance to recover from its wound, and her children a chance to grow up in a normal home.

Ten years from now I believe she will be thankful that she has been tolerant of her husband and far-seeing in regard to her children. Meanwhile, my heart aches for her.

HER FIANCE HAD THE [illegible]

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My fiance took the measles, and we didn't see each other for some time. When he was getting better, he invited me to his home to stay for a couple of days. My family thought it was all right, because we were engaged, and he had met my family to chaperone us. His father and sister were lovely to me, but his stepmother was no social. When I left, his father invited me to visit them again, but his stepmother was not at home.

Would it be all right to make this visit on his father's invitation, for a day or two, as we are engaged and expect to be married? I've always seemed to fit in very well with his family, but his stepmother's attitude keeps me WORRIED.

There could be no objection to a girl visiting the home of her fiance when he's recovering from the measles. The cordiality of your fiance's father and sister should make you feel welcome, even if the stepmother lived up to the reputation they have in many books. Go, by all means.

UNDER this picture our artist, Nell Brinkley, a true genius, in mind, heart and artistic execution, wrote three words, "THE UNDERSTANDING HEART." Those words apply to the motorcycle policeman, rugged young American on the left. From a distance he has seen a car parked where parking is not legal, with lights out, although the sun is not yet up. Full of stern resolves, thoughts of subpoenas, "slips," jail and fines, he steals up to find this young couple fast asleep.

Just after the sun went down they stopped where they are now "for just a few minutes' talk, just a little planning before the wedding which comes in a few days." Their "few minutes' talk" lasted long into the darkness, until they fell asleep, HAPPY BOY AND GIRL.

The young motorcycle policeman looks at them, and all fierceness dies from his eyes. No "slip," no subpoena, no fine, no jail FOR THEM.

In the lower right-hand corner, he rides away on his "beat" into the rising sun, saying, as he goes, "I'd deserve ten years if I pinched that young couple," good, kind young policeman.

Every other "traffic cop" would have done exactly as he did. Every one of them has a fierce expression, a big badge, a "gun" on his hip. But every one has a heart under that badge.

Readers, how beautiful is this picture by Nell Brinkley? What other artist in America could give to it such beauty and sentiment? NONE. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Rich Oils In New Nourishing Cream

By JULIET SHELBY

NOW that the drying days begin, the girls with dry skin better watch out or they will have leathery wrinkled skin in no time at all.

Barbara Stanwyck's satin-smooth complexion is the natural complement to her glorious eyes and silken hair.

Full well she understands and appreciates the need for a nourishing cream which will protect the skin's texture from the pleasurable hazards of out-of-doors sports.

For squint-lines appear in the delicate tissues around the eyes when the face is exposed to the strong summer sunlight, and laughlines grow deeper around the mouth.

Frequent dips into the sea and long hours devoted to sun bathing on the sand will ruin the texture of your skin.

In your carefree hours you will say you don't care a darn, but come a gala evening party when you want to look romantically lovely, and then—he story changes!

Keep your skin fresh and young-looking all of the time and you will have no regrets. Use a rich cleansing cream daily and slather oil all over your body when you play the role of sun-worshipper. And keep your face constantly lubricated with a rich nourishing cream. At night pat it in around the eyes and mouth with painstaking care.

If you like the fragrance of Jasmine and want to know the name of one of the richest nourishing creams on the market, I will give it to you. There is nothing high-hat about this cream—it comes in a modest jar —and it does serve a weary, lined face or one that has had little attention in a busy life.

It contains several fine oils which ease out that strained appearance, and its use will make your skin take on a fresh Summer youthfulness!

If you would like the name of this exceptionally rich, Jasmine scented tissue cream, call Miss Shelby, Liberty, 4000, or write to her at The Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty Answers

Question:—Recently I saw where some reader wrote to you for your 3 Day-Liquid-Diet and also your Banana and Milk Diet. Will you please forward these diets to me as soon as possible. Also please tell me whether I can alternate these diets. I want to lose 35 pounds in a hurry.

Mrs. Molly P., Allston

Answer:—Twenty-five pounds is a lot to lose—in a hurry. It can be done of course, but I would advise you to reduce gradually so that you will have no ill effects. The above mentioned diets can be alternated, but I don't think you will find that it is necessary.

Why not try the banana-and-milk diet first, and then if you find that you want to lose still more weight switch over to the 3 Day-Liquid Diet after a while. Since you failed to inclose return postage I must ask you to write to me again and this time please be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Question—Will you give me the name of the rapid-healing cream which you wrote about several weeks ago. I have continued blemishes on my face and will appreciate your giving me this information.

Frances M., Concord.

Answer—Trade names are never mentioned in this column, hence I am unable to give you this information here. Write to me again and please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope so that you can get a personal reply. If you have been troubled with acne for some length of time, why not try my 12-Day Complexion Diet for Skin Eruptions. The condition of your skin may be due to faulty diet and a poor condition of the blood, in which case this diet will clear it up.

Some Advice to June Grooms-to-Be

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

"YOU ARE always giving advice to prospective brides," writes a lady with two years of marriage to her credit. "What about bridegrooms? Or are they so perfect they don't need any?"

Lady, no one alive is so perfect as not to need advice.

Don't marry your fiancee if she is too young to have met any other men. Release her, let her look around for a year or two and then if she still considers you the best thing in pants alive, lead her up the enchanted aisle.

And by the way, when you do take the plunge, look as happy as you are supposed to feel. Too many bridegrooms give the impression—through nervousness—they are attending a funeral instead of their own wedding. Which gives the whole business a bad start.

KEEP FRIENDS

A big mistake committed by numbers of newly wed husbands is to give up the majority of their pre-marriage friends and expect their other halves to do the same so they can each devote all their time and energies to the other.

Don't do it. Even caviar palls the palate when eaten for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Introduce continual new diets—for diets read "friends," or boredom will soon rear its ugly head.

Don't even commit the insanity of calling your wife a dumbell—to her face. A gentleman named Leonard Lumb was recently divorced by his wife for doing just that. Which seems to prove that Lumb was dumb.

Try hard to refrain from nagging. Most novelists and all men consider nagging is practiced only by wives. This is a gross libel. Husbands are just as adept —perhaps a trifle more—at the ignoble art as women.

"Don't do this"—"Do that"; "Hurry up," and "What can you be doing to keep me waiting so long" are just a few male forms of nagging torture it is advisable to avoid.

SILENT MATES

Learn to be tidy in the house—especially in the bedroom.

A volcano in eruption has nothing on the average bed or dressing room after a male has dressed, undressed or changed his clothes for the evening.

Which is a distinctly strange phenomenon when one considers it practically takes as little time to fold garments as to hurl them under beds and into corners.

After marriage most husbands lose the gift of speech. They just can't, or won't talk at home.

In the morning, apart from a grunte or two regarding breakfast they ambush themselves behind newspapers and a wife is a magician if she can extract a word out of her mate. In the evening the speech coy-ness and the newspaper retreat is repeated.

Because you are married is no reason to take a silence vow. It isn't fair to the woman you wooed with high-faluting speeches. Try and remember that wives, for some strange reason, like to hear the prattle of their husbands.

Pay as much attention to your clothes and personal appearance after marriage as you did before. Husbands usually claim a grievance against their wives when the latter get sloppy and careless with their dress. But before casting a stone at the little woman, make sure your own appearance is without sin.

To end with a story and a moral.

"You seem to like John's attentions. Why don't you marry him?" said one cute female to another.

"Because I like John's attentions," was the haped reply.

Savvy?

How Far May Pity Go?

By RUBY AYRES

The poet tells us to cherish pity lest we drive an angel from the door, and yet surely there may come a time when by cherishing pity we give ourselves a permanent and unwelcome lodger!

The case I have in mind is of a man who was jilted on the eve of his wedding day by a girl who ran away with a married man.

Needless to say, that running-away did not end with wedding bells, and some time afterwards, when she found herself deserted and refused admittance to her father's house, she met her discarded fiance. She appealed to him for pity, reminded him of the past, and out of pity and not out of love he was kind to her, sometimes took her about, and visited her in her lodgings.

And then—she wanted him to marry her! He did not love her any more, but he was filled with compassion for her loneliness, and haunted by their shared memories of the past. What was he to do?

I do not think his pity should have allowed him to go to the length of tying himself, perhaps for life, to a woman who had once let him down, and who might easily do so a second time.

If the man had still loved her, it might have been an entirely different thing, or if in spite of all, she had discovered that she cared for him, but where is the sense when there is no real affection between two people in making an alliance which both of them may before long bitterly regret.

Married life is sometimes very long and seldom easy, so it is as well for the wise to start without such a serious handicap as lack of affection, and a host of memories which with the best will in the world can only be painful and perhaps bitter.

JOLLIER PARTIES

GOOD GAMES—GOOD FOOD—INFORMALITY

JOYFUL sounds float out upon the air. Laughter fairly rocks the house, and the neighbors look up enviously.

The Joneses are giving a party—and they always have such fun!

Their delighted guests praise these gatherings for their rollicking good games, delicious food and general informality. To be sure, the Joneses have fixed up some space in their basement as a game room. But if you can't do that you can play the same games in your living-room. The woman on the step ladder in our illustration is showing what you can do—with some paint—to make a spare room in your attic or cellar as gay as the deck of a ship. Paint the ceiling sky-blue; the walls, horizon-blue; the floor, light brown. A few feet up from the floor, paint a white line like a ship's rail. Paste paper stars around the ceiling. Mark off the floor for shuffleboard—or the exciting derby-race of little wooden horses that you see going on at the upper-right of our illustration. Perhaps your budget will also cover equipment for ping-pong, stick-a-disk, ten pins.

But just a little tip here. Few people like to romp every minute of a whole evening. So be clever—and have some comical quiet games up your sleeve, too! Say the one called "What's Your I. Q.?"—or in every-day language, "How Smart Are You?" For this, give each guest a sheet of paper that lists the following words: author, baseball player, novel, stage actor, movie actress, automobile, radio personality, vegetable, fish, musician, animal, aviator. Have some one call out a letter of the alphabet—such as "C." Then give the players two minutes in which to write a name beginning with "C" opposite each word. Not so easy as it seems! See how that group in the upper-left corner of our illustration is struggling with the matter. Must be there's a prize for the winner!

Or maybe they're working up a good appetite for the refreshments: hot hamburgers or frankfurts on toasted, buttered rolls (with plenty of pickles and chopped relish); hot coffee; fresh fruit; and home-made cookies.

MAYOR HONORS WAR SAILORS IN COMMON

Mayor Mansfield termed the sailor the "forgotten man" of Memorial Day as he paid homage to mothers and the sons they sent to war and death.

The mayor spoke at Parkman Bandstand in Boston Common where 2500 gathered for exercises by the Kearsarge Naval Veterans' Association.

This was but one of countless memorial services throughout the state. Every municipality had its own ceremony—some simple, others more elaborate, with parades, music and oratory.

The rank and file of citizenry made pilgrimages to various cemeteries, to lay wreaths or drop flowers on the graves of their own families. Mount Calvary, Mount Hope and New Calvary cemeteries were especially crowded.

GOVERNOR PRAYS

Governor Curley himself was one of those who went early to Mount Calvary. There he and his daughter, Miss Mary Curley, prayed at the grave of Mrs. Curley, then placed a number of floral tributes on the sward.

Thousands knelt near the grave of Reverend John F. Cummins, late Spanish war chaplain and former paster of Sacred Heart church in Roslindale, while Reverend Timothy Fahey, present pastor, solemnized a requiem mass in the Calvary cemetery chapel

Judge Daniel J. Daniel gave the principal oration at the unveiling of a placque in memory of Corporal James C. Shea of the 101st Infantry, killed overseas. This ceremony was also at Calvary.

TABLET DEDICATED

In the New Calvary a tablet was dedicated to the memory of Michael J. Perkins of South Boston, while Boston Lodge of Elks held its exercises at Mount Hope cemetery.

Hundreds were attracted to the Weeks Memorial bridge and thousands lined the banks of the Charles River for the ceremony of the Russel E. Hoyt Post, V. F. W., of Cambridge.

Wreaths were placed in Norman Prince square in memory of the World War aviator for which it is named. The Charitable Irish Society held its memorial at the Granary Burying Ground.

Marion E. Burrill, one of the contestants in the Junior Birdmen meet at Franklin Park tomorrow.

The above trophy will be awarded the victorious Junior Birdman at tomorrow's derby at Franklin Park. A trip to Los Angeles goes with it.

The rush of last minute entries swelled the total number to 139, probably the largest number of boys and girls ever to participate in a meet of this kind in Boston. It is more than twice the number that entered the 1934 outdoor Junior Birdmen tournament

The opening whistle will blow at 10 a. m. tomorrow and will be the signal for the start of the two-hour all-Balsa glider event, the first of three events to decide the New England championship After this event there will be a lunch period and then the two remaining events of the contest, the stick model event and the cabin (commercial) model event.

Contestants include all of New England's foremost model plane builders and fliers. While most of them represent Greater Boston, an exceptionally large number of entrants will be from New Hampshire and Rhode Island. Five girls are entered.

All are striving for the main prize, consisting of the New England championship, the handsome silver trophy and a 15-day, all-expense-paid trip to Los Angeles to take part in the national tournament. In addition gold, silver and bronze medals and certificates of proficiency will be awarded.

All boys and girls, as well as adults, and especially members of the Boston wing of the Junior Birdmen, are invited to watch the air races. There will be many thrills in seeing the delicate and finely constructed planes outfly each other in the derby. All flights will be for endurance, the longest flights being the winning flights.

There will also be a world of experience in model plane building for those members who have never built ships to compete in a race of this kind.

All of the planes will conform to certain specifications laid down in rules books which were distributed to the contestants.

Preparations on the field will be completed just before the opening whistle. The Boston Park department will supervise the staking out of a flying area and erection of a centrally-located platform. Within this enclosure, contestants will launch their planes. The contestants will be divided into groups and be assigned to certain judges and timers, who will be stationed at tables placed around the platform

Spectators will be able to watch the races from vantage points around the flying area. Police traffic officers and motorcycle men will be on hand to guard against any possible accident.

Upon reaching Franklin Field, located at Blue Hill and Talbot avenues, contestants should report first to the registrar's desk. There they will receive their credentials. They will then report to the inspector's desk where their models will be examined, weighed, approved and stamped.

Contestants will then report to the timers to which they have been assigned and stand ready for the opening of the glider event.

NURSE DIES OF LIP INFECTION

Twenty-year-old Lillian Currier died at Boston City Hospital today, just a week after she had received her nurse's diploma.

A tiny boil just above her lip killed her. It started last Thursday, when she was preparing for graduation exercises in the evening.

Since Miss Currier, an Amesbury girl, was secretary of the 1935 City Hospital class, she insisted she must take part in the ceremony

By Friday morning the apparently minor infection had assumed alarming proportions. Doctors ordered her to bed.

Classmates rallied to her bedside Doctors, with whom the young graduate nurse was a favorite, worked night and day.

By yesterday, when the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David J. Currier of Sanborn street, Amesbury, were called, her condition had become critical The parents stayed by the bedside all night.

ISLE ROW AIRED AT HEARING

Public hearing on the ouster of Martin J. Lynch of Mattapan from his position as guard at Deer Island on charges of neglect of duty were resumed today before Major George F. A. Mulcahy, master of the House of Correction.

Three island employes told of a disturbance in which Lynch appeared to be under the influence of liquor.

On cross-examination by Lynch's counsel they admitted that arthritis, to which Lynch was subject, may have caused his unsteady gait.

3 CONVICTED In St. John's Riots

St. John's, Nfld., May 31—Three men were convicted and four acquitted for participating in unemployed riots here May 10

Rioting broke out here May 10 when more than 900 unemployed marched to the commission government offices, protesting the government's refusal to listen to their demands. Hand to hand fighting followed when police ordered the crowd to disperse. During the melee several citizens were hurt.

CHACO TRUCE Declared for Parley

Buenos Aires, May 31—Truce in the bloody fighting along the Chaco front seemed likely today after Paraguay and Bolivia tentatively agreed to halt hostilities pending the outcome of peace negotiations.

The Bolivian delegation here to discuss settlement of the war with representatives of American neutral nations conferred at the Bolivian legation and afterward announced the tentative agreement.

NORTON URGES 'El' Removal Action

City Councillor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park, urging action on the proposed removal of the Elevated Railway structure said:

"I am told the government has received no request from the Mayor for any project involving the present structure between Forest Hills and Charlestown."

Hunt Dognapers

Police today were on the trail of two "dog snatchers," in an attempt to uncover the beginning of a new dognaping racket.

A valuable chow was snatched by the dognapers from Michael Shay, of Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, near Dover street.

WORCESTER Hotel Fire Probed

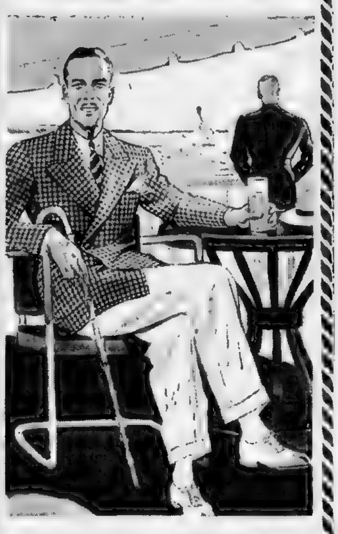

Worcester, May 31—Police are conducting an investigation today of the fire at Hotel Warren, the third within a few weeks. One hundred guests were routed by the blaze, which occurred in an unoccupied room on the third floor.

BABY UNHURT In 20-Foot Fall

Carl Phelps, aged two, of Sagamore street, Lynn, is none the worse today for a 20-foot fall from the second story of his home. He was examined at Lynn Hospital and found to have only a few minor bruises.

AUSTEN LAKE on Handing Harvard One of My Precious Plans

I AM OFFERING THIS perfectly priceless idea to Harvard at the small cost of 2 cents a copy.

It is such a simple idea that I marvel that some of the Lampoon's brain trusters did not stumble over it first.

Here it is:

All Harvard needs to do, to jam a capacity mob into its Stadium during the intercollegiate track games today and tomorrow, is to mount a totalisator on the rim of its steel stands, run up a row of pari-mutuel booths, and let the customers make book on the athletes' wind and limb.

Austen Lake

Harvard would skim 7½ per cent off the top of the kitty as allowed by Massachusetts law. And the scene would be sweetened by the agony howls of the patrons, which would surpass any football outburst ever heard within the ivy-mantled walls.

Harvard should be reminded that the time to catch a sucker is while he is still fresh and that Massachusetts suckers may grow historic any day now.

Such an opportunity as this may never come its way again, because when the IC4A games come back to Cambridge again, two years hence, Boston's betting public will have a bad case of gambling tremors from watching its spare funds leak down the horse and dog drains and out into the social seas.

* * *

Offensive Suggestions

IT AIN'T NO SIN to bet on the legs of man or beast in Massachusetts right at this moment. But in a few seasons people will be lassooed by the law for the same thing and be put under state glass.

It is a foregone fact that 83 nights of dog racing in Revere and 140 days of horse racing at Rockingham, Narragansett and East Boston, will have the betting folk of this community shucked pretty dry by that time and make them go back to timid nibbling at nigger pools, auto checks and sweeps receipts.

In saying this I am offending the race track proprietors, who are never so indignant as when the people's competence at the betting windows is doubted.

The promoters fear, if the people are told about this often enough, that they will begin to take thought. And the promoters shudder at the prospect of the people taking thought.

* * *

How to Catch the Disease

ONLY LATELY AN OPERATOR of a nearby horse track chided me for stressing the blind betting habits of the masses.

And he said: "Where can a man find a more wholesome outing than a summer afternoon in the society of refined people, watching the action of perfect animals? The judicious bettor never hurts himself and sometimes wins a very handsome profit."

I have never met a judicious bettor, or any bettor who is not trying to win himself back to evens, so he can swear off.

I doubt that even Mr. Pinkie Kandell, the Baltimore storybook character who ran $5 into $50,000 in Florida last winter, would be regarded as a judicious bettor, because Pinkie has been sweating down his roll at Rockingham lately until it is pretty anaemic by now, and he is going steadily backward toward his original five spot.

I wonder if anybody goes to a horse track to inhale nourishing air from the open country, or to enjoy the society of refined people, or to admire the elastic stretch of the horses' legs

To get the full flavor and the sensation of fur in your throat, you must lay a little sugar on an animal's snout and then root your selection home with body English and tortured zoo noises.

Then, after your horse has bogged down at the quarter pole and limps in with busted arches, varicose veins and a sacra-iliac, you go to thumbing the form chart of the next race to get back your original investment.

At that moment you are infected by the sinister racing virus!

Quicker Action at Ostend

NOW THE GAMBLING BUG acts on the patient like any other germ, from small beginnings into a multiplied mania.

As a handy clinical sample of what I mean, I cite the case of the Mid-Western tourist lad whom I picked up as a traveling companion in Paris some years ago, a square-chinned, amiable youth who had earned his holiday by shrewd saving and hard labor.

He was a sensible lad from intelligent background, and together we journeyed to Ostend. One of the tourist scenes there is the big waterfront Casino where games of chance, like roulette and chemin de fer, are operated under crystal chandeliers, satin bunting and gilt lacquer.

We were there, we agreed, as observers of an educational oddity, merely to absorb the experience as collectors of atmosphere. There was a symphony orchestra playing on a distant balcony that overlooked a moonlit sea and velvet distance where gleamed the yellow, winking eyes of coastal beacons.

Perhaps it was an hour that I sat and sipped there, watching the male peacocks turning their doubtful charms on pretty ladies, while the Western tourist lad wandered in the gaming halls.

It was not long. But in the interval, somehow, he had gone flatter than a poor house purse, his little traveling stake melted away like last April's snow.

"You see," he explained, with a tight-lipped, mirthless grin, "I experimented at the five-franc table, just for the kick. There was a right pert blonde girl in a plum-colored silk dress. Guess she saw I was fresh at the game, so she tipped me off.

"I got in kind of deep, but not bad. And the blonde girl says to move over to the 20-franc table to get quicker action and my money back. Well, I did . . . I mean I got quicker action."

Of course, the horse tracks don't employ pretty blonde women in plum-colored silk dresses to incite the judicious bettors to greater madness, but the universal effect of the gambling germ is the same.

Once in the blood it induces tongue tickles, heart flutters and the spinal creeps, sensations which in themselves are very lovely. But the aftermath is popping noises behind the eyeballs, dishpan symphonies between the ears, stomach quavers and cotton under the tongue.

But I cannot see, for the life of me, what this has to do with the priceless idea I gave Harvard at the small cost of 2 cents a copy.

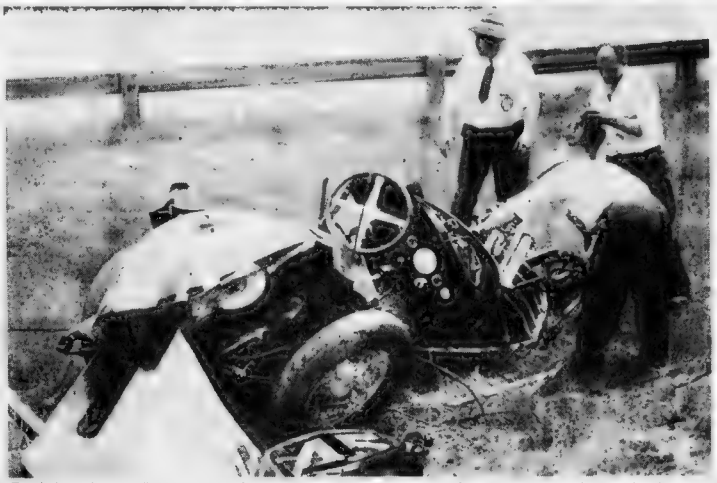

Death Wins Again

As 155,000 Watch 500-Mile Auto Whirl

Tangled wreckage is all that remains of the race car that hurtled from this track, killing driver Clay Weatherly and seriously injuring his mechanic during the 500-mile race.

Death, as so often in the auto grinds, scored a victory as horror-stricken thousands watched.

Thundering across the finish at lightning speed is Kelly Petillo's rebuilt car, to win the 500-mile race and approximately $50,000. The car was thought to be the most dangerous to drive in the field, but it proved its worth in the four-hour, 42 minute dash.

Petillo Wins Auto Race

Speedway, Indianapolis, Ind., May 31—Crashing the all-time 500-mile Indianapolis speedway record, Kelly Petillo, smiling young Italian from Huntington Park, Calif., won the Memorial Day classic here in a thrilling contest which brought death to Clay Weatherly, Harman, Ill., daredevil, and probably fatal injuries to his mechanic, Ed Bradburn of Los Angeles

Wilbur Shaw of Los Angeles roared in second, Wild Bill Cummings, winner of the 1934 race, third and Floyd Roberts of Van Nuys, Calif. fourth

Petillo whizzed around the two and a half mile oval 200 times at the amazing pace of 106.240 miles an hour, thus eclipsing the track record of 104.850 miles an hour.

Trailing the first four, were Ralph Hepburn, of Los Angeles, fifth; Shorty Cantlon, Detroit, sixth, Chet Gardner, of Long Beach seventh, Babe Stapp, Los Angeles, eight; Doc McKenzie, Eddington, Pa., ninth, and Chet Miller, Detroit, tenth

GREAT MEET

The usual pre-Olympic year track boom, plus a remarkable crop of great college athletes, made the week-end fete a standout

Southern California was in for some wild fighting, in its bid for the IC crown Harvard and California, to furnish the team competition, and a host of solo stars from scattered schools to grab titles and prevent leaders from running away with the games

Today's card included trials, and some semi-finals, in all events excepting the 1600 and 3000-meter gallops, pole vault and high jump. The latter four groups had a day of rest candled, with only final exam headaches

Day for rest for all the latter saved a few who had other jobs ahead

Like Gene Venzke of Penn, for example, who had to qualify today in the 800 meters before his Saturday afternoon stunt of 800 and 1500 finales

The sprinters and some of the field event grunters with two-day diggings were sure to earn their daily bread for this trip

Take George Anderson of California Unbeaten in the Coast dashes this Spring, he had trials today in the 200, and trials and semi-finals in the 100 this afternoon Now George turned in a 9.5 100 yards, and a 21 seconds 220 yards this year

Even so, he had to beat plenty of better than 10-second century men in the short dash, like Ben Johnson of Columbia, and Erskine Smith of Yale (21.1 for 200 meters) and similar antelopes in the longer sprint.

Jimmy LuValle, of UCLA, 1933 400-meter king and recordholder, needed to reach the peak of his comeback drive. Johnny McCarthy of Southern California, Johnny Hoffstetter of Dartmouth, Ed O'Brien of Syracuse, Tommy Ring of Holy Cross and Ham Hucker of Cornell were a few contenders today who had enough to even LuValle at his best

It was the same in every event Favorites had no assurance of qualifying For this reason today's racing was certain to be better than finals of most years. Hence the folks at the Stadium were sure of good thrill-value in the opening of the finest set of IC's in many years.

Harvard Among Title Threats

By Will Connell

Speed, strength and skill of 515 finely trained youngsters were poured into the Harvard Stadium turee today for the brewing of the classic IC4A track and field broth.

Boiled down by this afternoon's trials, a concentrated essence of steaming record talent will be ladled out tomorrow afternoon for the finals.

Southern California was the choice today, as the sage experts pored over records, calculated possible point totals, and otherwise made themselves appear a very busy lot indeed.

Not that the cash customers cared much for predictions. They knew today that the best IC reel in a generation was ready for unrolling on the green Stadium screen. So it was that a goodly throng this p. m., and more than 15,000 tomorrow, were due to witness the Sport of Sportsmen

The young men who run and jump and throw things for ICs reward of a few qick trips and a lot of fresh air were fit today for some real standard breaking

Helen Jacobs Advances in Paris Tilt

Paris, May 31. Helen Jacobs of Berkeley, Calif., three times American champion today made short work of Mme Sylvia Henrotin of France and entered the semi-final round of the French hard court tennis championship The American girl scored in straight sets 6—4, 6—2

Displaying form that closely resembled his 1934 performance, Fred J. Perry of England gained the penultimate round at the expense of Christian Boussus, France's top-ranking player Winning in straight sets the black-haired Briton was in an unbeatable mood, although he lost the opening game on service

After Boussus battered the English star's vaunted delivery, Perry dug in and won 13 straight games before dropping another in overwhelming the tricolor star 6 1, 6—0, 6 4

H W (Bunny) Austin, Perry's Davis Cup teammate, toppled the towering Roderich Menzel of Czechoslovakia in a protracted five-set duel, 1 6 10-8 2 6 6-4 6 2 Menzel won the first set easily and appeared on the way to victory when Austin netted seven set points before finally running out the second set

Menzel took the third set but the strain of the battle told on the massive Czech and he wilted rapidly under Austin's peaceful and forcing forehand shots.

Jack Crawford, Australian Davis Cup ace, seeking to regain the title he won in 1933, disposed of Marcel Bernard, French youngster, 6-3, 6-1, 6-1, to reach the semi-finals.

CASEY Picks Giants FOR FLAG

HURLERS BEST IN LEAGUE

By Eddie Brietz
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York May 31—Casey Stengel's money says the Giants will win the National League pennant with room to spare.

Back from a swing around the western end of the circuit with his skidding Brooklyn Dodgers, the Sage of Flatbush, after seeing the Cardinals, Pirates and Cubs go through their paces, thinks there's nothing to it but Bil Terry and his smooth-working, highly polished Giant machine.

"I've seen 'em all now," said Stengel today as he herded his Dodgers aboard a train for a series with the Phillies, "and the Giants are the class of the league. Yes, sir; I figure they will win standing up.

Fine Pitchers

"Bill Terry's got the pitchers. That's what counts. Show me another staff in the National League that can stack up with Hubbell, Schumacher, Parmelee and Freddie Fitzsimmons. Don't start looking, brother. They ain't there.

"Last season the Cardinals got a lot of help from the Dean boys.

"Well, the Deans may perk up and win 40 games this year, but do you believe it? I don't. They're finding the going harder. Just isn't done two years in a row these days."

The Brooklyn mahatma isn't at all downcast about his own club, despite yesterday's reverse by the Giants at the Polo Grounds which bumped the Dodgers into fifth place.

"Some of the boys aren't hitting up to snuff, but they'll get going and if we can pick up another good starting pitcher the old Dodgers will make plenty of trouble between now and October. Our club is scrapping and that counts a whole lot with me."

3 TWI Contests TONIGHT

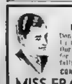

The Boston Park League will complete its third week of the going tonight with three games on the bill for the after-supper fans of Boston

The two top teams in the circuit, Jordans and the Hennigans of Roxbury will clash at the Dorchester Town Field.

Charley Bird probably will do the hurling for the retailers, while Barney McDermott will counter with Walsh or Regan This will mark the first meeting between the teams this season

Dick Casey's club of Neponset will travel to Roslindale to meet the new team under Jerry Shanahan that is fast becoming the talk of the circuit. Jerry will use the veteran Jim Shea on the hill, while Lefty O'Hara, who did so well for the B. C. freshmen all year, will be the nomination of the Neponset aggregation.

The third clash of the evening brings together the Maddens and the Commonwealth club, mixing at Connolly playground in Roxbury. Both of these nines have shown vast improvement during the past two weeks and mean to make a bid for higher berths in the standing. Petersen and Antonellis will hook up in a box duel.

More Honors for Babe

(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Philadelphia meant to do well by our Babe when it presented him with this beautiful floral piece on his "Day." But, ironically enough, it may have marked the demise of the ex-home run king as a regular. Babe claims he has water on the knee, the result of a crash against the bleachers in Cincinnati. He appeared for only one inning in the Memorial Day twin bill with the Phils.

School Golfers Battle For George Wright Trophy

By Bill Grimes

After a lapse of five years, the George Wright Cup, emblematic of the New England Interscholastic championship, returned to competition today at the Weston Golf Club, where 66 schoolboys are playing a 36-hole event for the honors of being the third winner of this trophy.

Six years ago tomorrow, Wilfred Crossley, then representing Dedham High school, became the first New England Interscholastic titleholder at the Oakley Country Club, by a margin of three strokes over John Parker, Exeter.

Parker had the title in his pocket for 35 holes but he bumped into an eight at the last hole, and Crossley walked away with the title

In 1930, at the Unicorn Country Club, Joseph P. Lynch, the ex-state and former junior and caddy champion, took the title away from Crossley by one stroke

For some unknown reason, the contestants in the second New England Interscholatic championship were unable to score during the first round. During the first 18 holes, not a player succeeded in breaking 80. Starting the second and final round, Joe Lynch, Wilfred Crossley and "Ancy" Doyle were leading the field with even 80's, one stroke up on Ned Peterson, Cambridge Latin, and Graham Reid, Farmington, Conn

In the final round, Lynch came through with a snappy 76, which was a stroke better than Crossley, and took over the title.

All the fields in both of the previous New England interscholastic championships were large, they did not measure up to the gathering at Weston today

In the other titular events, it was a foregone conclusion that the fight for the championship would be among Lynch, Crossley, Wilfred Ogg and Doyle, with Peterson and the Reidy brothers having an outside chance.

Of the sixty odd youngsters playing at Weston today, almost one-third of them have an outside chance of coming through to win the win.

Of course, golfers of the Art Rogers, Harry Hood, Bob Ryan, Johnny McNiff, Francis Galvin and Tom Armstrong type have an edge on the other contenders, but if Bill Herlihy, Shirley Moulton, Joe O'Hara, Tom Logan, Mike Kusiak, Stanley Taylor, Bob Whittingham, John Waloshyn, Wilfred Wedge, Ken Cody and Tim Holcomb are clicking, they will be troublesome for the more highly publicized entries.

Azucar Guard a Suicide

Dope Plot Linked With Horse's Return

By Universal Service

Detroit, May 31—The suicide of a newly-hired guard and the possibility of a dope plot marked the unsuccessful return to the races today of Azucar, winner of the rich Santa Anita handicap.

Steven Logoski, the new guard for Azucar, 7-year-old chestnut gelding which carried the colors of F. M. Alger, Jr., to a sensational victory in the $100,000 California race in February, was found lying in Palmer Park, his throat slashed with a razor he clutched in one hand Police said $1464 84 was in his pockets.

Police momentarily linked Logoski's suicide attempt to the possibility of a plot to dope Azucar, which made his first start since his Santa Anita triumph in the $3000 added Col. Alger Memorial Handicap at the Fair Grounds here on the holiday.

Although he was defeated in the mile and a sixteenth feature by E. F. Seagram's consistent Stand Pat, Azucar showed no traces of doping.

He closed with his usual rush in the stretch run but found the top-weight of 128 pounds too much against the brilliant Stand Pat.

DOGS To Race SOON

DATE KNOWN TOMORROW

Official opening day of New England's first greyhound racing meeting at Wonderland Park, Revere, will be announced tomorrow by Managing Director Russell Murray.

It is generally believed that the day will be near the first of the week, directly after free public inspection of the $200,000 plant and completion of the schooling races.

Russell said today regarding the opening: "We are especially anxious to have the plant finished, but we want nothing left undone.

"The last detail must be completed and closely inspected before the gates will be thrown open to the public.

"We will lose several days of racing, but sacrifices must be made in order that a smooth and successful opening can be assured.

"The construction work is being hurried, but the project will not be rushed to any extreme in an attempt to break records and open early.

"We hope to make the first impression a lasting one, and our chief object will be to win immediate public approval of this new sporting enterprise."

The major work is done and the biggest obstacles overcome. The huge grandstand, with over 600 box seats and unreserved seats accommodating more than 4000 people, is practically completed

The paddock, where the greyhounds will be inspected before the public; the jinny pit, administration building, and other structures are finished with the exception of minor details,

Grading in and around the grandstand is nearly done, and the important task of surfacing the race track itself will be completed by tonight.

The surface will be made of a mixture of sand and peat. Experts believe this to be the finest footing for the fleeting canines

The vegetable qualities in the peat make it particularly comforting for the greyhounds.

SOX FARM Won't Have Farm

Charlotte, N. C., May 31 (AP)—The Charlotte Hornets, Boston Red Sox farm, won't have a farm of its own after all.

Plans were made a few days ago by the Piedmont League entry to sponsor an independent semi-pro team here, but they have been dropped.

Ed Hill, Hornets' business manager, said the idea was given up after receipt of a telegram from W. G. Bramham, head of the minor leagues, frowning upon it.

Johnson, Kamm Row Up for Airing

By Associated Press

Chicago, May 31—Walter Johnson's immediate baseball future rested today in the hands of Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis

Whether Johnson would continue as manager of the Cleveland Indians depended on how Landis ruled on the claim of Willie Kamm, veteran Indian infielder, that the "Big Train" was not justified in sending him back to Cleveland while the club was in the east last week

Johnson said Kamm who carried a price tag reported as $100,000 when he made his major league debut with the Chicago White Sox in 1923, had done the club no good by his advice and suggestions to Indian youngsters. Kamm denied harmful intentions and demanded an opportunity to clear himself in a hearing before Commissioner Landis.

Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland club, said that in the event that Landis decided in favor of Kamm, he could do nothing but "dismiss Johnson and hire a new manager." Bradley supported Johnson when Kamm was sent home, and a year ago when there was criticism of his manager's handling of the club, backed him to the limit.

The hearing was scheduled for this morning in the hotel suite of Commissioner Landis, who has been kept away from his office by a severe cold.

Al Spohrer

In and Out of "Clink"

Philadelphia, May 31 (AP)—Al Spohrer, Boston Braves catcher, hit into a double play on his last trip to Philadelphia.

Two detectives with a bench warrant from Delaware County tossed him a fast one just before the Braves played the Phillies yesterday, and Al posted bail on his wife's charges of desertion and non-support.

From court he hurried to the the ball park and caught part of the game.

Today he's due back in court at Media.

Mr. Boston

Ross, McLarnin Bore

By JACK CONWAY

THE LATEST controversy in regard to the decision in the Barney Ross-Jimmy McLarnin bout may result in the fourth meeting between these welterweights.

I hope it does not take place. I think the public is very much fed up on the Ross-McLarnin merry-go-round.

Mr. Boston

There was real interest in the first meeting of these men, which took place in New York last June. In that tussle it was evident McLarnin was on his way out as a ring headliner.

I thought he had the edge on Ross, even though he didn't receive the decision, but his boxing was poor.

• • •

McLarnin has lost the old killer instinct, which once made him an international boxing sensation. He no longer sails forward with both fists flying. He still packs dynamite in his right, but he is cautious in his delivery of punches. He fears being hit.

When boxers are young and rushing to the front, they do not give too much thought to the opposition. They have perfect confidence in their own ability to crush all-comers. They rush forward certain they can beat their rival to the can-

• • •

The McLarnin of today can still punch with his right, but before he lets a sock go he is trying to figure out what is going to happen to himself if he misses. This is why his punch lacks its old thunder. It isn't backed by the recklessness that goes with youth.

• • •

ROSS' CLASS

ROSS is a great fighter. He first proved this fact when he won the lightweight championship from Tony Canzoneri. Now that he has received two decisions over McLarnin, boxing fans will generally admit he is the real McCoy.

• • •

Ross was wise to vacate his lightweight championship. If he had tried to make 135 pounds he might have been defeated by either Canzoneri or Lou Ambers.

• • •

McLarnin is worth $500,000 and so at least is not obliged to worry about the depression.

• • •

DeGLANE HERE

HENRI DeGlane is here and ready to put the finishing touches to his training for his finish bout with Dan O'Mahoney which will be staged at the Garden on next Friday night under the direction of Paul Bowser and the James M. Curley, M. C. O. F.

I have always considered DeGlane one of the greatest wrestlers in the world. I rank him with Ed George and Jim Londos. The Frenchman was taught the fundamentals of the mat game by Earl Caddock. He then went on to become world's champion.

• • •

DeGlane came to this country chiefly to wrestle Ed Don George in a return title bout. Lucien Riopel has landed this mat plum. It will be staged at the ball park in Montreal on June 24.

• • •

$594,397 Wagered On Holiday

By 40,000

BIG RACE WON BY POMPEYS PILLAR

By Walter Kiley

Rockingham Park, N. H., May 31—A bit of a breathing spell, and one badly needed, is in order today.

It is just the calm between the holiday storm which swept all previous crowd and pari-mutuel records into the discard, and another frenzied outburst of racing fever which is anticipated for tomorrow's fine week-end program.

Track officials had been optimistic about the Decoration Day races but their most sanguine hopes fell far short of actual developments.

The day was perfection itself, and the crowds came early. Long before post time of opening race, the complete supply of 20,000 programs had been exhausted. More were printed and those sold out.

The crowds stood jammed in the clubhouse and grandstand enclosures and down the stretch to the stables.

'TOTE' RECORD

Our own impression was an attendance of 40,000. In any event it was the largest in Rockingham's history.

The almost unbelievable sum of $594,397 exchanged hands via the wagering process, $50,000 more than the best previous mark established on September 15, 1934.

When the fourth race hit $82,179, a new race mark had been hung up. It was shortly broken, however, when the sixth went to $82,980. And definitely and completely washed out when the eighth and final number saw $91,176 pass over the cashier sills.

To complete the picture, the four-year-old black gelding Adamite, owned by S. F. Baez, came romping home the surprise winner of the finale in the new record time of 1:59.3 which wiped out Brass Monkey's track mark of 2:00 2-5 set a year ago.

It was of little moment after the first shock of the disaster had been assimilated that the heavily backed Plat Eye had been raced off the oval turf in the $10,000 Decoration Day Handicap feature, with W. B. Coe's Pompey's Pillar, ridden by the veteran, Harry Richards, showing up the star-studded field to carry off the major portion of the purse, amounting to $7550.

IDENTIFY IN

Twenty-five thousand more are anticipated tomorrow. The Hampton Cup Handicap, $5000 added feature, carries main interest. It is a mile and one-eighth event which suffers little by comparison with the Decoration Day stake.

Back from the Belmont Park wars where he finished fourth in the great Suburban Handicap, won by Head Play, comes Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Identify, winner of the Toboggan and Granite State Handicaps four days apart.

Chief contention is promised by Robert Robertson's Lynx Eye, winner of the opening day Speed Handicap; J. Y. M. Martin's Dark Hope, trained by Louis Feustel, who brought out Man 'o War; Statesman II, English star imported by Victor Emmanuel; Walter O'Hara's Howard, which finished third to Identify and Vicar in his only Salem start of the year; Prince Fox, Texas champion, who has yet to show top form here; Thomasville and Teralice of the Percy Pike stable; Dogmata, Vanderbilt's front running entry; C. V. Whitney's Incandescent and others which make a most formidable field.

Marlborough, Thorny Lea Scenes of Open Tourneys

HARRY BOWLER WELCOMES GUESTS AT MARLBOROUGH

By BILL GRIMES

Two of the most popular open tournaments on the M. G. A. list, Marlborough and Thorny Lea, started this morning and will continue through tomorrow.

C. Harry Bowler, formerly of the Winchester Country Club, held a house warning the day before the holiday and is all set to welcome the visiting golfers who will play at Marlborough, which is still one of the toughest nine-hole courses in New England.

Years ago, the open tournament players came to the realization that there is always a good time at Thorny Lea, and a large number of Greater Boston golfers will check in at the Brockton club today and tomorrow . . . As usual, the Brockton shoe manufacturers have donated a fine array of footwear for the Thorny Lea open.

* * *

It is rumored that Jean Bauer, Rhode Island, has been selected to play against Joyce Wethered next week at Winchester, and are the faces of some of the W. G. A. players red? . . .

And, rightly, for the Rhode Island player, during the Midland District-Rhode Island match at Weston on Wednesday but she would have trouble trying to outscore Rosamond Vahey, the state championship, Mrs. W. M. Austin Mrs. Henri F. Prunaret, Jr., Mrs Brad Whittemore and a few other members of the W. G. A. . . .

Laura Robbins, Midland, and Mrs. G. P. Buell, Middlesex, are playing off for the individual championship of the M. G. A. team match season today at Brae Burn . . . Mrs. Buell will attempt to give Miss Robbins four strokes . . .

While on the subject, Miss Robbins will bear watching next week at Brae Burn, during the W. G. A championship . . . I do not predict that she'll win the title but I look for her to ruin some of the outstanding players who are serious contenders . . . For a youngster, Miss Robbins has a bag full of shots, and she'll hit those little white agates with any one in the association. Equally as important she is a born competitor . . .

Although you do not hear a great deal about it, Weston is one of the busiest courses in this district . . . There is more golf being played there than ever before. As a result of the increased activity there'll be a large field check for the annual father-and-daughter open tournament next Wednesday . . .

* * *

If "Toot" is on his game, the Richardsons from Highland will come close to winning this event, for Cynthia has improved her game noticeably over last season when they tied for second net . . . W. D. Andrews and his daughter, Polly, from Reservation, topped the field at Weston a year ago with a gross of 89 . . .

* * *

Harold W. Pierce, treasurer of the U. S. G. A., and Fred Corcoran, state handicapper, will leave for Pittsburgh on Tuesday for the United States open championship . . . Prior to his departure, Corcoran will handle the board at the Brae Burn C. C. during the qualifying and first match play rounds of the W. G. A. championship . . . Dan Keefe will pinch hit for Freddie during the remainder of the week . . .

* * *

John Bernardi, professional at Charles river, is so busy teaching that it is necessary to make appointments for interviews . . . He'll soon be starting on his second million if his "dogs" hold out.

Lea Hansberry, who was until this season Bernardi's assistant, has reported at his new berth at Rangeley Lakes, Me. . . . During the past year Leo has developed into a top-notch golfer and should take those Pine Tree State pros for the B. R. this season.

* * *

The Retail Stores Four Ball League is playing at the Brae Burn Country Club today, with the Filene's-Jordan match as the feature attraction . . . Now that he's tipping the scales at better than 200, Larry Bitner expects to get more distance off the tees and through the fairways, but George Sexton predicts he'll still be short with his approach putts . . .

Yachtsmen Open Season Tomorrow

By E. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

Yachtsmen have reason to look forward to the biggest racing year since before the depression.

South Boston's 65th annual regatta, inaugurating the sailing season in Boston Bay, saw a starting fleet of 88 boats. A year ago only 65 started on Memorial Day.

Tomorrow will see the season in full swing, with races at most harbor yacht clubs and the Class I races at City Point. Sunday brings the initial interclub championship races, under the Squantum Y. C. colors.

Commodore Ambrose W. Isele, again heading the South Boston club, saw an unusually promising fleet hoist sail.

Nearly all craft which raced last season were on hand, plus a goodly number of brand new yachts. For the first time since business slumped, new Indians, Snipes and Swampscott dories have been built to spur the older craft in the summer's racing.

Old-timers took most of the prizes, though. George Wightman, perennial skipper of the Indian dory Peggy, led his class home by a big margin. Herbie Allbright's Osseao was second.

Leslie Rawding got the first winner's gun of the year when the Nipper crossed the line for a Manchester I Class victory. Oriental, just bought by Commodore Hosea White of Savin Hill, was fifth, but would have done better had she not parted a spinnaker halyard. Larry Washburn sailed her Bonnitwo, Dr. Cogan's champion of last year, won in the older Class I division.

The South Boston 15-footers, appearing in a new marconi rig, saw H. A. Turner winning with Dixit. Billy Cohan's Geraldine, still painted an emerald green, won in the Cottage Park 15-foot class.

And Alcardi's O. K. was the best of the Snipes, which with numerous additions from Squantum promise to be one of the harbor's biggest classes.

And the new Yankee dories, which Squantum is promoting, led the handicap class.

EAGLES MEET Springfield

The Boston College baseball team will meet the Springfield College nine in a return game at Alumni Field this afternoon.

Ted Galligan, powerful junior right hander, who has won four and lost one this year, will oppose the invaders on the B. C. mound. Coach McCrehan is expected to save his ace, Charlie Marso, for the important tilt with Providence College at Alumni Field tomorrow afternoon.

HUSKIES CLOSE With Lowell

Northeastern University's baseball nine brings its current season to a close tomorrow afternoon at Lowell against the Lowell Textile team.

In their earlier encounter, the Weavers defeated the Huskies in a close contest.

The final tilt will be the seventeenth for the McCoy men, who have a record of eight victories and eight defeats.

Lynx Eye Choice in Feature 'Cap

By Dave Wilson
(Selections made for fast track)
BEST—SWASHBUCKLER—1st

Rockingham Park, May 31—A well matched card of eight races, headlined by the $5000 added, the Hampton Cup Handicap, a mile and a furlong test for three-year-olds and upwards, is on top for race-goers here tomorrow afternoon.

The feature has attracted an overnight field of 12 top-notch handicap stars, with R. Robertson's Lynx Eye, runner up in the New Hampshire Stakes last Saturday, shaping up in my dope as the probable winner.

Swashbuckler, Janon Fisher's fleet juvenile, shapes up not only as the probable winner of the five furlongs of the opening number, but as the safest hazard on the card.

FIRST—SWASHBUCKLER, SEA BISCUIT, SOBRIETY

Just can't pass up SWASHBUCKLER in this affair. The front-running son of Canter stamped himself one of the best juveniles on the grounds in placing to Jamboree last time. He shapes up as the one solid horse on the card. SEA BISCUIT'S last race should not be taken too seriously. The Hardtack colt was off a bit slower than usual that day and was unable to find clear racing room. In front of that the Wheatley flyer was a corking third to Microbe. SOBRIETY, a Vanderbilt colorbearer, is highly fancied by the clocking fraternity on the strength of several brilliant workouts.

SECOND—JESSIE D. M., GOLDEN VEIN, SURVEYOR

JESIE D. M. needs only intelligent handling in order to lead this fied under the imaginary wire. The Master Charlie filly is clearly the speed of the party on past performances. he finished third to Candy Maid last time out. GOLDEN VEIN, away since last winter in Florida, is reported on edge by the clockers. The Watts colorbearer is a shifty animal in a race of this sort when right. SURVEYOR, dropping down from $3750 company, figures to share in the spoils.

THIRD—CANCEL, FIRE REEL, LULU LITE

Giving CANCEL another chance in this affair. The Haymaker colorbearer was a red hot favorite over better ones earlier in the meeting, but failed to measure up to expectations. Sine then he had been breezing easy half-miles in around :50, and is coming up sharp as a tack. FIRE REEL, cheap and honest, figures to offer the contention. LULU LITE, a brisk morning worker, for the remainder

FOURTH—IMMUNE, DE VALERA, GENERAL LEJEUNE

IMMUNE appears well placed. .The Strolling Player miss has been showing excellent speed in swifter company. Looks loke a smooth ride would just about clinch top honors for her. DE VALERA displayed marked improvement in placing to Prosecutor last trip. He shapes up as strictly the one to fear. GENERAL LEJEUNE was the hottest kind of a paddock tip last out and finished only a half length behind De Valera.

FIFTH—LYNX EYE, IDENTIFY, COLLATERAL

LYNX EYE, a sturdy route-running colt, appears well suited by the weights and other conditions The Robertson breadwinner turned in a corking performance in placing to Dark Hope in the New Hampshire Stakes last Saturday. IDENTIFY, hero in the Toboggan and Granite State handicaps, failed to measure up to the top one in the New Hampshire Handicap. That may have been an off day for the Vanderbilt star. COLLATERAL is at his best over the mile and furlong route

SIXTH—OSCILLATION, IDLE ALONG, BOOCAP

OSCILLATION'S last race was in the nature of a tightener and shoul dnot be taken too seriously. The Griffith colorbearer was fourth that day to Legender and other fast ones. In front of that the Blondin mare had worked brilliantly. She is dropping down a few pegs and appears will placed. IDLE ALONG, honest as trey come, showed excellent speed in drubbing cheaper ones last time. BOOAP was the easiest sort of a winner nl her lone start at the meeting. She is jumping up quite a bit off that effort, but there is no telling just how good she is right now.

SEVENTH—STEPBROTHER, DANCING MACK, TARTAN BETSY

STEPBROTHER figures to handle a field of this sort if sent right back. The Hamilton color-bearer, always partial to the mile route, is sharp as a tack right now, judging by recent efforts. DANCING MACK, an old fellow with a smattering of class, displayed excellent speed in placing to St. Omer last trip. He is strictly the one to fear. TARTAN BETSY was a winner over a shifty field last trip. She merits serious consideration off that effort.

EIGHTH—SAULT D'AMOUR, TOP HIGH, ZEMBLA

Have a hunch that SLUT D'AMOUR will take the top and never be headed in this marathon affair. The Sand Mole gelding's recent third to Flower Lady was a corker. Past performances attest to his staying powers. TOP HIGH, a bangup winner last time, is strictly the one to fear. ZEMBLA is good right now and she'll like the raute

Cavalcade Quits Track For 3 Weeks

New York, May 31 (AP)—Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade, which stumbled yesterday at the start of the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park won by Head Play, will be out of training for two or three weeks because of superficial cuts suffered in the mishap.

Trainer R. A. Smith said he was hopeful the injuries would respond to treatment very shortly. Cavalcade, which was the favorite in the race, unseated his jockey, J. Gilbert, but Gilbert was unhurt.

Boston American "Daily Double"

HANDICAP GAME

20 Racing Tickets Awarded Every Day

You May Win, Even Should You Not Pick the "Daily Double"

16 Here are my racing selections for the first and third races at Rockingham, Saturday, June 1

City .... State ....

Your entry must reach the "Daily Double" Handicap Game Editor of the Boston American, P. O. Box 1946, or deliver to 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, not later than 1 P. M., Saturday, June 1

Here are the Rules:

To play the "Daily Double" Game name the horses you think will win the first and third races at Rockingham. Then place the names of the horses you believe will run second and third in each of the two races.

Tickets to the Rockingham Races will be given each day to winners.

Winners will be picked under the following rules:

Entries that pick the "Daily Double" will be given first consideration. Should there be fewer "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, winners of the remaining tickets will be scored as follows: First counts 8 points, second counts 4 points, and third counts 2 points in each of the two races. The entries scoring the largest number of points will be declared the winners.

In the event there are more "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, the prizes will be given to the "Daily Double" winners who score the largest number of points in selecting the horses that run second and third in the first and third races. In scoring these winners the following rules will be observed: Place counts 4 points and show 2 points for each race. Tied contestants will each receive a ticket.

In the event any of the horses you pick are scratched, the next horse will be automatically moved up one space on your list. For example, should your first choice fail to start, the second horse named becomes your first choice and the third horse your second choice.

Except where horses are scratched, your selections must run in the order in which you list them on your entry blank in order to be counted. ONLY THE NAME OF ONE HORSE MAY BE SELECTED WHERE THE HORSES ARE COUPLED IN BETTING, AS IN ENTRIES AND FIELDS. The decision of the judges will be final and no entries returned.

A coupon for Monday's "Daily Double" selections will be printed Saturday.

Each day's winners will be printed in all editions of the Boston Evening American the day after the races are run (Saturday's winners in Monday's editions).

BOSTON BANK

To Reduce CAPITAL Account

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Stockholders of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston will hold a special meeting July 8 to consider a reduction in the capital stock account.

It is proposed to reduce the par value of the shares from $25 to $12.50, thus effecting a reduction in the capital account of $10,000,000. This amount will be transferred to surplus account. Capital setup will then consist of $10,000,000 in capital and $20,000,000 in surplus. The new plan will not disturb in any way the present status of Shawmut Bank stock. There will be the same number of shares; each will have the same assets as before and dividend reduction is not contemplated.

Henry I. Harriman

* * *

Acquisition of the Boston Elevated Railway by the Boston Metropolitan district has simmered down to a question of the savings which might be effected. Henry I. Harriman, chairman of the Elevated trustees, speaking impartially before the House ways and means committee, outlined savings of $470,000 of this $220,000 will be a saving on federal income and capital stock taxes. The balance will result from the difference in interest paid on Metropolitan District bonds, with sinking fund allowance, and the present dividend on the stock. It is on this phase of the bill that final decisions will be made. If the road can be pulled out of the red proponents of the bill will argue the expense of purchase is justified.

* * *

State Street Notes—The action of American Woolen in withdrawing prices is not indicative of any fear conditions in the industry will go to pieces because NRA is dead . . . Cotton mills are looking hopefully toward the AAA cases now in the courts . . . If these too are called unconstitutional, textiles will face a bright future on nearly all fronts . . . Right now the silk industry of Rhode Island is hardest hit . . . Pawtucket leaders say the silk mills must devise their own codes . . . Big trouble of the moment is that other sections may not do the same thing.

* * *

Stock markets are now paying attention to the chaotic French situation. In the excitement following the NRA decision, the acute financial and political crisis in France went practically unnoticed. Attempts to figure out the exact results of a final, complete collapse of the gold bloc are hazardous to say the least. In any event conservative Boston financial circles are limiting stock market participation for the present and indicate new purchases will be confined to fairly sizable dips.

* * *

Briefs—Traders are already looking for a technical rally of some sort . . . Measured by the 30 industrial stock average this is expected to come from the 106-108 area at least . . . The rails and utilities look better each session . . . These two groups, practically unexploited in the last two months, could out-distance the industrials with a break in news . . . And there are real potential developments in this direction . . . Killing of the Wheeler Rayburn bill and a constructive Presidential message on rails.

LATE SELLING HITS LIST

New York, May 31—A late selling wave struck the stock list today and most issues tumbled sharply lower from levels that ruled most of the session.

Standard Oil of N. J. gained about a point. Consolidated Oil, Socony Vacuum and Shell Union scored fractional gains.

New York Central, Union Pacific and other rail leaders held narrowly. U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and American Can were unchanged.

J. I. Case declined and other farm equipments were busy.

French Situation

The seriousness of the French situation was exemplified by the statement of the Bank of France, as of May 24, showing a loss of 3,166,000,000 francs in gold during the week. Since the rush of withdrawals started around March 29, the bank has lost more than $858,000,000 in gold.

Divergent views were expressed in New York banking quarters as to the ability of the continental gold bloc to cling to the metallic base. Some foreign observers believed France would be able to hold out in the event internal political pressure is lessened.

Another step to protect the guilder was taken by the Bank of the Netherlands when it raised its discount rate from 4 to 5 per cent.

Commission houses reported their clients were still confused over the NRA debacle, although the feeling was general that the administration would quickly attempt to revamp its recovery plans along lines not in conflict with the Supreme Court decision.

In the meantime, however, some industrialists feared price uncertainties might exaggerate seasonal trade influences.

Dun & Bradstreet, in the week end business review, found that the arrival of warmer weather had lifted retail sales in many cities, but it was thought the volume for the month would fall below that of the corresponding period last year.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
TREASURY DEPARTMENT

BOSTON, May 31, 1935.

Sealed proposals for MASSACHUSETTS SERIAL BONDS amounting to $3,000,000, exempt from Federal and Massachusetts Income Taxes, will be received at the office of the Treasurer and Receiver-General up to 12 o'clock noon (Eastern Daylight Saving Time) on June 12, 1935, at which time they will be publicly opened and read.

The bonds are duly authorized by Acts of the Massachusetts Legislature on account of the following loan:

EMERGENCY PUBLIC WORKS LOAN

$2,000,000 July 1, 1936—July 1, 1945, $200,000 each year
1,000,000 July 1, 1936—July 1, 1940, $200,000 each year

$3,000,000

The above bonds will be in coupon form of a denomination of $1000 each and may be exchanged for fully registered bonds. The bonds when put into registered form cannot be reissued as coupon bonds.

Bidders will name one rate of interest only on the entire $3,000,000 which rate must be a multiple of ¼ of 1%. In comparing bids preference will be given to the bidder whose bid provides for the lowest net interest cost to the Commonwealth (total interest for the duration of the loan from July 1, 1935, less the amount of the premium bid).

Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for two per cent (2%) of the amount bid for, to the order of the Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, on a national bank or trust company doing business in this Commonwealth or in the City of New York.

A descriptive circular will be furnished upon request.

Any award by the Treasurer to a successful bidder is subject to the approval of the Governor.

The Treasurer reserves the right to reject any or all bids which are not in his opinion advantageous to the interests of the Commonwealth.

CHARLES F. HURLEY
Treasurer and Receiver-General.

HOLLAND

ABBEY Players Excel In 'Far-off Hills'

By GEORGE HOLLAND

By rote, this should concern exclusively the swell performance given last night at the Hollis St. Theater by the Abbey Theater Players in Lennox Robinson's good play, "The Far-off Hills."

* * *

The full power of these unique and remarkable artists is brought to bear on this happy vehicle, and those of us who may have been impatient with preliminary selections in the Abbey Theater repertory for Boston, were inclined last night to cheer. "The Far-off Hills" has been praised before, and reviewed in detail, when it has played in the past. Last night's performance served to project the full power of the Abbey group's acting in a vehicle worthy their efforts. With Synge's "Riders to the Sea," and "The Playboy of the Western World" as tonight's attractions, the Abbey ensemble should gain so much favor that those of the theater-going public who have not yet visited the Hollis this week will be present before the brief engagement is ended.

George Holland

* * *

From "The Far-off Hills" of Mr. Robinson and the Abbey Theater to Chicago is, at least, a sleeper-jump. And from Chicago to the far-off hills of Boston's City Hall district is an equally-long Memorial Day pilgrimage.

Such a pilgrimage was made yesterday by Rufus A. Dawes, president of the recent "A Century of Progress," known familiarly as the Chicago World's Fair.

Rufus A. Dawes is a brother of Charles E. Dawes, he of "hell 'n' Maria' fame, the rugged individualist who represented the United States at the Court of St. James recently.

* * *

Ambassador Dawes was quite a showman Rufus Dawes was a spectacular showman. Between them, one in charge of the fiscal arrangements, and Rufus A. in charge of the imaginative arrangements, they made the Chicago World's Fair the only real financial success in the annals of world's fairs.

* * *

So we meet at King's Chapel Cemetery yesterday afternoon, you and I because we know about it now, and Rufus A. Dawes, who quietly came to Boston to pay reverence on behalf of himself and his brother to a former famous Dawes, who, were it not for Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, might be one of the most celebrated patriots in American history.

The inscription of William Dawes' tombstone in King's Chapel Cemetery reads as follows: "William Dawes, Jr., son of Liberty, and first messenger sent by Warren to Lexington, the night of April 18-19, warning Hancock and Adams of the coming of the British troops. Born April 6, 1724, died Feb. 25, 1803."

Well, there was a chap named Paul Revere who went to work himself that night. The poet Longfellow gave him a bit of billing. William Dawes, Jr., missed out on the exploitation.

But I think for real Americanism, we can take the case of Rufus A. Dawes, making that sleeper-jump from Chicago to the middle of holiday-Boston to place a Colonial flag and wreath on his unsung ancestor's grave.

* * *

And there wasn't a single photographer nor a reporter at the cemetery when Mr. Dawes made his unobtrusive visit.

It is apparent that the Dawes family reserves its flair for showmanship for unhallowed considerations. This may come to light in another journal, but I doubt it, because Historian Herbert J. Devine, grandson of General William H. Devine, vaulted the iron fence at the cemetery this morning to copy the inscription from William Dawes' grave.

Back Again in New Film Thriller

Valerie Hobson, heroine of mysteries, is in the new screen thriller, "Chinatown Squad," Keith-Boston attraction.

Rich Fare at The Boston

Crime and mystery, both comic and sinister, can be seen this week at the RKO Keith Boston. For the twin features are "Chinatown Squad," with Lyle Talbot and Valerie Hobson, and another of the Wheeler-Woolsey whimsies, "The Nit Wits."

"Chinatown Squad" places Lyle Talbot in the role of a beefy young ex-policeman, who now acts as chauffeur and guide on a sight-seeing bus to San Francisco's Chinatown. At least, it looked like San Francisco, what with the way everybody chased everybody else up and down those steep hills.

A mysterious internationalist who has been shipping airplanes to Chinese Communists in Foo Chow, is slain in a chop suey palace. Everyone is suspected of the plot to do him in, including pretty Valerie Hobson, who has been consorting of late with no one but thieves and rascals.

Mr. Talbot helps Miss Hobson to escape from police grilling and then sets out to solve the mystery himself. His rival in the sleuthing is Hugh O'Connell as a not too bright police inspector. From then on things are a little puzzling, but it all ends well.

Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey are a couple of cigar-counter clerks in "The Nit Wits." Bert's girl, Mary, works upstairs in the office of a philandering music publisher. When the publisher is murdered by a mysterious assailant called the Black Widow Spider, Bert, along with virtually every other member of the cast, is suspected.

If you like the Wheeler and Woolsey brand of nonsense, "The Nit Wits" ought to furnish good entertainment. Fred Keating, former ace comedian-magician of the vaudeville stage, is in it.

The prevailing element of mystery is carried out in the Ross-McLarnin fight pictures, an added attraction at the Keith-Boston this week, the mystery being why Ross was given a unanimous decision.

Hollywood Studio Gossip

Fred Astaire to Leave for Vacation Abroad; New Film in Bill

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, May 31—Fred Astaire, who has worked steadily since he came to Hollywood and made a hit for himself on the screen, leaves for Europe as soon as he completes "Top Hat."

He has a date at RKO studios September 1 to be co-starred with Ginger Rogers in "Follow the Fleet." You have no idea how popular this team has become just within the last year.

Louella O. Parsons

Off the record and not official at all, I hear it whispered that Pandro Berman has made a pretty penny for himself producing the Ginger Rogers, the Astaire and the Katharine Hepburn pictures on a percentage basis. If you follow the movies you can see for yourself Pan has had few failures and any number of successes.

* * *

The wise-cracking Jean Arthur has wise-cracked herself right into a job as Harold Lloyd's leading lady in "The Milky Way." Harold, who never makes more than one picture every 18 months, is getting ready to make the first picture he has made for another studio since he graduated from two-reelers.

Adolphe Menjou has the second male lead as the fight manager, and the gags, which I am told have been added to the play, are funny enough to satisfy the most rabid comedy audience.

* * *

Sydney Franklin seems lucky for Norma Shearer. He will direct her for the sixth time in "Marie Antoinette" as soon as he finishes "Dark Angel." Norma will come back to the screen, after the arrival of her baby, in Stefan Zweig's novel based on the life of "Marie Antoinette," which Irving Thalberg is now preparing for her. Franklin directed her in "Smilin' Through," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," three of her outstanding pictures.

* * *

Anna Sten is forgetting pictures for at least six weeks. She will take a hurried trip to Paris to see her mother, who is living there, having left Russia at the time when conditions became intolerable. Anna hasn't been abroad since she came here as a Samuel Goldwyn star, but now she has finished her contract with him she will take a holiday before she makes any new deal. There is much talk that she may go to Columbia, but this is still in the lap of the gods.

* * *

If you have ever talked for five minutes to Frank Morgan on cards you will learn that he has one phobia in the world and that is playing bridge. He can't see why any people with common sense would want to play bridge. Of course, we don't agree with Frank on account of bridge is one of our favorite indoor sports. He will have to get over his aversion to Mr. Culbertson's business in "Glitter," Joan Crawford's next picture, for, believe it or not, he plays a bridge-loving father.

* * *

Pardon me if I make a little prophecy. Ian Hunter, the English actor brought over by Warners, should, within the year, be tops. He was so marvelous on the "Hollywood Hotel" hour with Bette Davis in scenes from her picture, "The Girl from Tenth Avenue," that the whole town started talking about his performance. As for Bette—well, she is getting to be a dramatic actress with few equals in the movies—better with each picture.

Snapshots of Hollywood

ANN HARDING at the Cocoanut Grove dining with MAJOR SAWBRIDGE and a party of friends; she had a good laugh over the Tic Toc Girls; ESTHER MUIR and SAM COSLOW, who have stopped denying their marriage, at a night club; JOE REILLY, Fox chief of police, taking out a license to marry REATA HOYT; he goes to New York for his research work on "Police Parade," which he sold to SOL WURTZEL.

LEE TRACY with a most attractive girl friend dining out; now that LEE is back in circulation again he is tres popular with the girls; the newest thing in cars presented to MRS. BORZAGE by FRANK when she reached here from Honolulu; it has a bar; PHILIP BARRY on the MGM lot writing for DAVID SELZNICK; he is taking his movies seriously; NOREEN PHILLIPS, the widow of MAITLAND RICE, marrying STEWART STEWART on June 16; the marriage will be performed at the home of ROSALIE STEWART, sister of the bridegroom; PAT O'BRIEN planning a Lambs' gambol in honor of BERT LYTELL; that's all today. See you tomorrow!

French Film Pleases

"La Dame aux Camelias" (Camille) came to the screen of the Fine Arts Theater on Wednesday, bringing with it Yvonne Printemps, charming star of the Parisian stage, and Pierre Fresnay in the leading roles of the Dumas romance.

"The toast of all Paris" is a time-honored label only approached in this country by our local "Oh, her ancestors came over in the Mayflower!" One waxes cynical over both, reflecting that the citizens of Paris spend all their time in toasting and that the Mayflower was a very big boat indeed.

Though no great beauty, as beauties go, this celebrated French star brought to her role as the unhappy Marguerite Gautier an attractive wistfulness which one finds hard to reconcile with the copy-book version of what a great Parisian charmer ought to be. In short, she brought a delightful surprise.

Stars in Victor Hugo's Famous Role

Fredric March is the brave Jean Valjean of the Victor Hugo film, "Les Miserables," now on the screen at Loew's Orpheum.

Norumbega Show

Free open air movies are one of the many attractions at Norumbega Park in Auburndale, which has attracted crowds since its recent summer opening.

Bill Blomberg's "Animal Circus," with Wick Leonard of Oklahoma displaying his skill with the lasso, is another favorite with visitors.

At the Tremont

The two major screen features on the Tremont program are Sally Eilers and James Dunn in "Sob Sister," and Jack Benny and Mitzi Green as the stars in "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round."

Katharine Hepburn On Keith Screen

"Break of Hearts" Also Features Charles Boyer and John Beal

By JOYCE DANA

The undeniable charms of music and Miss Katharine Hepburn play their parts in "Break of Hearts," current attraction on the screen at the Keith Memorial.

No longer tom-boyish and tantalizing, Miss Hepburn is an intensely romantic young composer, with her head and heart in rhapsodies and sonatas.

A room on Washington square, her friendship with Jean Hersholt, the old maestro upstairs, and her music, fill her life until Charles Boyer comes along.

Katharine Hepburn

Mr. Boyer is the idol of New York, musically and socially. His presence on the conductor's stand at concerts is commanding. His way with the ladies is irresistible.

But these two young romantics fall in love. There's a long and rapturous honeymoon, far away from the adoring ladies at Carnegie Hall, with a starry-eyed and blissful Katharine wishing and believing with all her heart that it will last forever.

Since it never does, it's not surprising that once back in Manhattan's mad whirl, Mr. Boyer succumbs to some blonde charms for dinner at the Ritz. And since a dramatic situation or two must be injected for Katharine's talents, the trusting young wife, innocently dining out with a family friend, confronts the philandering husband at the scene of the crime.

With a dignified and old-fashioned indignation at such perfidy Katharine packs up and leaves. Mr. Boyer takes to drink, dishevelment and disgrace.

The long deferred reconciliation comes after Reno, and just before Katharine marries the family friend; and the fadeout shows Charles wielding the baton over Beethoven once more, a glamorous wife waiting in the wings.

Despite Miss Hepburn's most noble efforts and some flattering photography, the tried and trite story doesn't quite jell. Mr. Boyer parades all his manly charms, too, and is quite all right, if a bit on the juvenile side, as one of the music world's outstanding conductors.

John Beal does his most believable work as the young man-about-town, Jean Hersholt gives his best as the kindly old professor, and lesser parts are credibly acted by Sam Hardy, Inez Courtney, Helene Millard and Ferdinand Gottschalk.

A strong story, a strong role, and a strong directorial hand would do more for Miss Hepburn than "Break of Hearts." Her admirers, however, will find her lovelier-to-look-at than ever.

'JUNGLE GOLD'

By Rex Beach

The devastation wrought by the hurricane brought Don Manuel from the Capital and he took charge in person of the relief work along the Costa Norte.

When he finally arrived at Puerto Cortes he stopped with the Pentecosts.

There one night, in the hearing of Hannah and Dan Marchand Steve exploded a bombshell he had long been saving for the President.

Now that the storm sufferers had been provided for and the towns were being rebuilt, he considered it a propitious moment to spring his surprise.

He led up to it by sketching briefly the developments which Don Manuel, Marchand and he had completed and by reporting upon the damage to the fruit business which the blow-down had wrought.

"We've done a fair job," he told them. "Between us we managed to kick out a tyrant, established a decent political system and provide a pretty good government for this country.

"Don Manuel has effected his pet social reforms: Dan's dream of a great banana industry founded on bedrock has come true. It's the principal industry of Honduras but it's as hazardous as a crap game and the country suffers more than we do when the dice run against us.

"Something must be done about it. There's one job left for us and it's the biggest one we've tackled. We've got to open up the interior; we've got to build a railroad."

"Caramba!" the President exclaimed. "I never hoped to hear that from you."

"I don't mean a road to Tegucigalpa. I mean a road up the Ulua—one to serve the banana trade first and the Capital later. You can get along without it; we can't."

Marchand shook his head, "Impossible! It would cost too much."

"Don't consider what it will cost to do the job; think what it will cost not to do it." Steve said forcefully. "And don't call it impossible. We can do anything we set out to do. We couldn't have built it two years ago, now we know—and the world knows—what the fruit business means. The money can be raised."

"He's right," Garcia cried. "The state owns millions of acres; it will grant the entire Ulua valley to anyone who will put through such an enterprise."

"A road to the Capital would starve, this one will make a profit. It will mean millions for us."

Plan Railroad

Marchand hesitated before admitting, "I daresay that's true. The Ulua is now practically free from the Panama disease and the potential earnings of those lands would warrant almost any bond issue within reason.

The company could afford to contribute heavily; with Government backing these securities would sell. It would be a difficult and an expensive undertaking, to be sure—if it went wrong it might even wreck us—but I'm not thinking of that, nor of its money costs. I'm thinking about the cost in lives.

"That's part of the price, Dan."

"Certainly. Nevertheless it's a price I hate to pay. The French tried heavy construction work in Panama and you know the result. It was a ghastly fiasco.

There are more men underground down there than on top of it."

"Theodore Roosevelt believes it can be done."

"With the resources of a great nation to draw upon he'll probably put his canal through. We'd have no such backing for our railroad.

"Conditions here are even worse than down there. In spite of all Hannah has done, our death rate here at Cortes is appalling.

"If we start work on this job we'll sentence thousands of poor devils to death. I don't want to face that. I like money. I want to create but I hate to destroy and I'm fed up on taking human life."

"Steve!" It was Hannah speaking. "We've all got enough and more than we need. The business is bigger than you ever dreamed it would be; you men have done everything you set out to do.

"Why risk all you've accomplished? Why conquer the world? Napoleon attempted that and he left a trail of corpses across Europe; he saw his empire fall.

DeLesseps had a dream like yours. He squandered millions; in eight years he lost upward of twenty-two thousand men.

If France failed on the Isthmus can you succeed up here? Can you contemplate taking the lives of twenty thousand men? I couldn't. No railroad, no industry is worth a price like that."

As his wife spoke the fire went out of Steve's face, leaving it cold, emotionless.

The woman knew that expression and read in it the answer to her and Dan's objections. Here was a man with one idea, with a fixed radius of vision; his heart was set upon this project; he believed in it and he considered himself the appointed agent to carry it through no matter what the cost.

Argument could not sway him; if men were to perish, he would send them marching to their death. He would lead them.

Marchand was encouraged by the wife's attitude to protest more strongly. Had Pentecost considered the country through which rails would have to be laid in order to serve the interior?

These coastal swamps were a formidable barrier. They had defeated more than one invader. The roadbed would have to be built in part over a bottomless quagmire that shook underfoot.

It stank of death and the natives dreaded it too deeply to risk its dangers. Labor would have to be imported and that would add to the slaughter; unseasoned workers would perish like flies, for when those miry depths were stirred fevers bred.

Six months of wallowing in slime like an alligator would kill the strongest man, but this job would have to be housed in the sunless depths of the jungle; they'd be forced to wade by day and lie down in mud-caked garments at night.

It meant floating hospitals, an army of doctors, huts built upon piles, a brief, hideous reptilian existence amid a thousand tortures. Nor could engineering genius estimate the cost in dollars.

Fevers—Death

Steve was fully aware of all that. Privation. Hardship. Fevers. Death. What did they count for? And why over-estimate the obstacles? The thing could be done; the completed project would bring health, happiness, prosperity, life to other thousands. Profits too. Profits to the builders themselves, to the republic, to posterity. But profit or no profit the thing must be done.

Was Dan growing so soft that he counted drops of sweat? Progress was inevitable. It was the Law. Man's one and only duty to himself was to press on, blaze trails, build, conquer. Cost? What did it matter!

This trio had set their hands to a task. Were they weak enough to drop it half done? That was cowardly. Dan must be getting old. His virility was ebbing.

"I've surveyed a route and it's practical," Steve asserted with the return of his first enthusiasm. "I've been over it time and again and I know every foot of it. It follows the coast, then cuts inland to San Pedro. It ends at the Pimienta Crossing.

"That'll be our job. Others can carry it on to Tegucigalpa later, if they choose. Think what it will mean to the interior. As much as it means to us. Today, we're at the mercy of every storm, every drop of rain.

"Our losses are enormous and no other business could absorb them. With this job done our work of the last two years will become priceless."

"Indeed, yes!" Garcia broke in. Steve's fever had infected him and now he envisaged as a reality those dreams he had so long cherished, so he loosed the full force of his enthusiasm upon Marchand.

The merchant, however, was tired; he had fought his fight and won, he had done well enough and he was content to rest.

Furthermore, every instinct within him rebelled at attacking a new enterprise freighted with such hazards and uncertainties as this.

He continued, therefore, to argue and to protest, although he knew full well that he would ultimately yield. And yield he did.

Aside from his own weakness, what surprised him most was the realization that Steve Pentecost was the real president and motivating power of the Marchand Fruit Company and that he, Marchand, was only a figurehead.

The footless wanderer, the soldier of fortune, had come of age at last, he had arrived at a stature which dwarfed his associates, and henceforth his was to be the mind in control. How he had grown since that night in New Orleans when, at the suggestion of a stranger, he resolved to go out and build an empire for his son. He was symbolic of the age, no doubt, and Dan was outmoded. The world certainly moved.

This blond giant had seen only a false vision of the future in that red light resort. Yes, and later when the Progresso surrendered, when Puerto Cortes fell and when the white flag was flown from the palace at Tegucigalpa.

That empire of Steve, Junior's, was not to be founded on military success but upon industrial conquest.

Here was the father's field: this was to be his crowning achievement.

Steve Pentecost stood at last upon the threshold of his destiny and Marchand surrendered to him unconditionally, convinced that he was yielding to the inevitable.

But Hannah did not surrender. That night she lay awake, frightened and dismayed. She rose finally and for a long while knelt in prayer.

Steve, she knew, had signed his death warrant; it was for his soul that she begged mercy.

Wild West Film Epic Thrills

Howard Hill, world's archery champion, says it with bow and arrow in "The Last Wilderness."

It is an honest and exceedingly interesting picture of American wild life and big game, which is one of the attractions on the new program at the Paramount and Fenway.

With methods more subtle but equally effective, Mae West gets her man in "Goin' to Town," the companion picture on the twin screens.

Mr. Arthur Brisbane found "The Last Wilderness" worthy of editorial comment, and wrote of it:

"Those that have seen pictures made in Asia and Africa, with the same old lions, tigers, snakes and crocodiles, will realize that the big game and the magnificent scenery of their own country far surpass in interest anything to be seen on any other continent."

Mr. Hill is the hero of this imposing saga of the great wild West, and the villain is a particularly ugly killer bear whose telltale footprints sealed his doom as surely as any criminal's finger prints.

Vast herds of antelopes in flight, the only pictures ever photographed of a mother bear in hibernation, Mr. Hill's artistry and skill with the primitive weapons he uses in disposing of a vicious rattler, a fight to death between a coyote and a mountain wild cat, are some of the memorable shots which a patient cameraman caught.

The heavy-eyed Miss West has another made-to-order adventure in "Goin' to Town."

Inheriting a few millions from a big-hearted cattle king, Mae's conquests lead her to South America and Southampton. Both fortresses fall before the West onslaught.

With a dozen handsome heroes ready to fight for her smiles, Mae's true-blue heart yearns only for a titled gentleman who sneeringly spurns her advances.

He's a willing victim at the end, discovering that beneath her wiles and wisecracks there's a nobility of soul that's above reproach.

Paul Kavanaugh, Ivan Lebedeff and Monroe Owsley are some of the long line on Miss West's right.

3800 Mile Hop Planned By Clipper

By Universal Service

San Francisco, May 31. A great stir of activity at Alameda airport where the Pan American Clipper is housed is believed to presage a new flight, this one as far as Midway Island, [illegible] the Pacific.

While Pan American officials here refused to confirm reports that the flight had been ordered, mechanics and technicians swarmed around the huge flying boat that blazed the way on the first flight of a transport plane to Honolulu and return.

The 19-ton over ocean air liner made test hop over San Francisco Bay Wednesday, and another is scheduled for tomorrow.

After the Clipper's round trip to Honolulu April 23, it was announced her next voyage would take her to Midway, next step on the projected air mail and passenger route to China.

SHE FELT MARVELOUS WHEN HABITS BECAME REGULAR

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Relieved Her Constipation*

Read this splendid letter: "I tried everything, with little or no results. I felt miserable, was 20 but looked much older, and my skin was continually breaking out.

"I decided to try ALL-BRAN three meals a day for about a week. Elimination became regular; I felt marvelous and looked better. Even my outlook on life was changed."—Mrs. Armand Hamel, Pawling, N.Y.

Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.*

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. It also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle—and safe for normal individuals. More effective than "bulk" in leafy vegetables, as it does not break down within the body.

Isn't this natural food pleasanter than patent medicines? Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Much more effective than part-bran products. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

"Shot From Ambush"

Cambridge Man Tells of Blast That Saved a Life

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY.

Today, boys and girls, THOMAS LUCAS, OF 21 MARION STREET, CAMBRIDGE, bares his soul in a story telling how close he came to being a killer.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Of course Tom was only 10 years old but nevertheless he planned killing a man and actually set the plan in motion and if Fate hadn't stepped in—in the strange fashion she often does to upset us poor humans—Tom's whole life would have been changed and a human life chalked up against him.

Tom's story brings up the age-old conflict of heredity and environment and in Tom's case environment wins.

There was nothing in his family history that pushed him on to a killer's role but something in his early environment did.

He was born in a certain state, east of the Mississippi river, noted for feuds and killing from ambush.

His family were never entangled in any of these private wars between clans, but on all sides of them their neighbors were.

As early as Tom can remember he recalls hearing of neighbors being shot in retaliation for real or fancied wrongs and these vicious and senseless feuds began to take on a heroic light in his childish eyes.

Tom pictured himself avenging a wrong to some member of his family and he was bitterly disappointed that his father was a law-abiding citizen and not embroiled in one of the deadly family quarrels.

Like all the other mountaineers, Tom's father had a long muzzle-loading squirrel rifle and Tom was already a crack shot.

He could drop a squirrel out of a tree at 50 paces but he longed to have something better to shoot. If only somebody would just start something, he thought.

And then Tom had a swell idea. Why not start a feud of his own? Somebody always had to start a fight and, as it looked like he couldn't expect any overt act from his family, he decided to start it himself.

But Tom didn't like to just step out and shoot one of his friends from ambush without a reason so he only cleaned up his squirrel gun and waited for a darn good excuse to kill a man.

The excuse came, Tom says, sooner than he expected and he looked forward to killing his man and starting a nice bitter feud that would perhaps go on for generations.

He pictured his children shooting and getting shot right down the line and the more he thought of it the better he liked the idea.

The man Tom picked for his victim was a certain Mr. John Hawkins—Tom's family's closest neighbor—a man liked by all but one who never mixed in any of the local shooting frays.

Tom never let the popularity of Mr. Hawkins influence him a' all. The minute Mr. Hawkins had caught Tom and a young friend of his in the Hawkins Melon patch and then told the boys famished he was marked for death.

Tom had received a whipping from his father because of Mr. Hawkins' complaint and this in Tom's mind was sufficient reason for his longed-for feud. He planned to shoot Mr. Hawkins from ambush and set in action the future Hawkins-Lucas feud.

The 10-year-old avengers plans were not as childish as you might think. He et a watch on Mr. Hawkins habits and learning that his enemy passed a certain secluded spot, on his daily walk Tom quietly went ahead and rehearsed the killing.

Everything went fine at the rehearsal so the next day he took up his position early at the ambush and waited grimly for his victim to pass.

In his hands he clutched the trusty squirrel gun and as he lay behind a hidden log with the gun trained on the road he thought of the nice private feud he was going to start.

Tom loaded the old muzzle loader carefully for this shot. He even put in an extra load of powder to make sure and rammed it home grimly.

Tom says the hour he waited seemed like a week but finally he saw Mr. Hawkins coming down the road and got ready for the kill. He knew he couldn't miss at that distance. He squinted along the old barrel and as Mr. Hawkins came into the sights he pulled the trigger.

Bam! something landed on top of the killer's head with a terrific crash—it sounded louder to Tom than the crash of the gun—his head hurt and when he touched it, found it dripping with blood. "Help! Help!" he screamed.

And, believe it or not, Mr. Hawkins—who by all the rules of feuds should have been dead—rushed over and picked the little boy up in his arms and ran home with him. It's darned embarrassing to a killer to have your victim carry you tenderly home and then wash off your head and ask you how you could be so badly hurt and still yell so loud. But that's exactly what happened.

Mr. Hawkins tried to find out what had happened but Tom wasn't going to tell him and then get shot! No sir-re. So Mr. Hawkins bound up his head—he had a deep cut from his eye into his hair—and investigated.

He found the old gun had exploded—saving his life and driving the tube back against Tom's head.

And then Mr. Hawkins, instead of shooting him dead, just told Tom how wrong all those feuds were and let him go!

"That was 30 years ago," Tom ends, "and the deep scar on my head is a daily reminder of the time I nearly became a killer. Each time I see it I thank the Lord for the accident that made me pause and for the fatherly advice I got from that grand old man, Mr. Hawkins."

That's telling us Tom and step right up to the winner's table for your check. I've got a lot more checks where that one came from, boys and girls, so don't be bashful. Tomorrow's thriller tells of a "Victim Who Wasn't There."

MARIA JERITZA WILL BE RADIO FEATURE ARTIST TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

More of the romantic "Chocolate Soldier" airing it seems, and this one due (WNAC) tonight must be the third, if not the fourth to be broadcast in as many weeks.

Time is, as usual, from 9:30 to 10:30, when that "Hollywood Hotel" highlight is again in the wind.

So the composer Strauss would rejoice were he to know his operetta provided so much inspiration for the radio rajahs. Maria Jeritza, the celebrated soprano, is to be a guest artist on the program, but not in connection with the above adaptation. Jeritza will vocalize excerpts from operas such as "Tosca" and "Tannhauser", and "Fedora."

"N. F. T."

Dick Powell, now in Annapolis, Md., making a movie, is to do some long-distance mastering of ceremonies, since the presentation is a Holywood studio staging.

* * *

Singing the dramatic "Danny Deever," by Walter Damrosch, dean of American conductors, Wilfred Glenn, bass, will share the solo spotlight with Jessica Dragonette on the weekly concert hour this evening (WEEI) from 8 to 9.

For her soprano solos, Miss Dragonette has chosen the beloved "Liebestraum" by Liszt; "Mavourneen," an Irish love song by Lang, and Manning's "In the Luxembourg Gardens."

* * *

"Big Bill" Tilden, former national singles champion and now a leading professional tennis player, is to be the guest on the "College Prom" program (WBZ), featuring Ruth Etting and Red Nichols' orchestra, as slated tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Tilden will give his expert views on the prospects of the American tennis team for 1935.

* * *

Rosemary and Priscilla Lane, featured on the Waring's Thursday night broadcasts, are considering establishing a marriage broker's office, using a list of well over 300 names of would-be husbands who have written to them. The lovely Lane Sisters have a choice of an Alabama share-cropper, two Louisiana State juniors and a retired prune rancher among their offers of marriage.

Barry McKinley, taking a cue from the musicians who offer all comers their sponsor's cigarettes, no matter what brand they themselves smoke, gives every girl he meets a cake of his sponsor's soap. It leads to not a few misunderstandings, he says, but on the other hand, it has ben the start of a lot of fine, clean friendships.

Radio Answers

Q—Are the two comics "Stoopnagle and Bud," on any big featured half hour or hour at present H. L., of Hyde Park.

A—They have two periods per week of their own, on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:15 p. m. Also on Friday nights at 10:30. However, latest word says they will join the Fred Waring "Pennsylvanians" hour beginning in early July.

Q—What is the last name of "Charlie" who is with Jack Pearl when he does his "Peter Pfeiffer" broadcast? Recorder, of Canton

A—His name is not "Charlie," as indicated, but Cliff Hall and he has been on the stage with Pearl for years previous to his radio work.

Q—How old is the Boston singer, Buddy Clark? Misses, of Millis

A—He is in his 25th year.

Q—Is the voice of "Seth Parker" coming back? When will Phillips Lord bring his sailing ship back through Boston?

Yankee, of Gloucester

A—Negotiations are under way now for sponsorship. Phil sold that old boat and passed it along for a third of what he paid for it.

Q—Is it true that Harriet Hilliard and Ozzie Nelson are really Mr. and Mrs.? Bachelor of Needham

A—When both were here last week that same question was put to them by the editor of this radio space, but very vigorously denied. Will check further.

Q—Does the oloist Rose Zulalian have any regular radio schedule?

D. W. K., of Dorchester.

A—Not at present, although her personality and vocal artistry is ever in demand at patriotic rallies and concerts in the East.

Q—What has become of the "Di Marco Sisters,' who were singing in Boston radio circles not long ago?

C. H. of Chelsea.

A—They are in New York and now featured with the Phil Spitalny "Hour of Charm" program over coast to coast waves.

Martha Lee Gives Tips on Native Dishes

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

Every country has its native dishes, depending upon the foods that are grown within its boundaries, the fish that swim its waters, and the spices and seasonings that abound.

We have a genuine interest in these different dishes; and this week, with Mrs. Winifred B. Loggans of the Kellogg Company, we traveled to Germany, Denmark and India, by way of America. We add "by way of America," because many of these dishes need to be adapted for use on our tables, the ingredients changed and often times the spices or seasonings reduced.

The dishes are all very easy to prepare and would fit into the scheme of simple housekeeping. We shall be very happy to send them along to you on request, and receipt of a loose 3c stamp. They include cheese cake, curried shrimp, a delicious Norwegian salad of smoked herring combined with vegetables and spices.

One completely American recipe was made, however—bran muffins. We can take all the credit for this healthy food which every one likes. These had a fluffy and tender texture, and were most appetizing. The recipe is given in large quantity—Mrs. Loggans suggests using it for waffles and griddle cakes, as well as bran muffins: so make up the large batch and put part of the batter covered in the refrigerator and use for waffles, or thin with milk for griddle cakes.

BRAN MUFFINS, WAFFLES AND GRIDDLE CAKES

- ½ cup shortening.
- ½ cup sugar.
- 3 eggs (beaten well).
- 1 2-3 cups sour milk.
- 1¾ cups all-bran.
- 2 cups flour.
- 2 tsps. baking powder.
- 1 tsp. soda.
- 1 tsp. salt.

Cream shortening and sugar. Add eggs, sour milk and all-bran and let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift flour with baking powder, soda and salt and add to first mixture—stirring only until flour disappears. Bake in greased muffin tins in a moderate oven (400 deg. F.) for 20 to 25 minutes or in a hot waffle iron. Or, thin with milk for griddle cakes.

Bran can also be made into a quick yeast bread. With warm days approaching, we plan to do as much work in as little time as possible, and bran bread is an excellent suggestion, not only for the family meals but for picnics and late snacks.

This particular recipe includes honey and mashed bananas. It will be found to keep moist and tender for a week or so. As a matter of fact, it will taste better on the third day than it does on the first.

HONEY-BRAN-BANANA BREAD

- ¼ cup butter
- ¾ cup honey
- 1 egg
- ¾ cup all-bran
- 1½ cups flour
- 2 tsps. baking powder
- ½ tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. soda
- ½ cup chopped nuts
- 1 cup mashed bananas.

Cream the butter and beat in the honey and egg. Add the all-bran. Sift the dry ingredients and mix in the nuts. Add dry ingredients to the creamed mixture alternately with the bananas. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) about one hour. Makes one loaf, (8½x4½).

HONEY SPICE COOKIES

- ¼ cup shortening
- ¾ cup honey
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1 cup all-bran
- 1 1-3 cups flour
- ½ tsp. salt
- ⅛ tsp. cloves
- 1 tsp. cinnamon
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- ¼ tsp. soda
- 1 cup chopped raisins

Cream the shortening and honey. Add egg, all-bran, sifted dry ingredients and raisins. Drop by teaspoonfuls on greased baking sheet 2½ inches apart. Bake in moderate oven (400 deg. F.) about 30 minutes. Storage improves the flavor of these cookies. Makes 2½ dozen cookies 3 inches in diameter.

PWA DOCKET 1914

Notice to Equipment Contractors

Sealed separate or combined proposals for Furnishings, Laboratory supplies and Laboratory Equipment for the Laboratory and Mortuary Building at the Boston State Hospital, Dorchester Center, Mass., will be received by the Department of Mental Diseases, at Room 167, State House, Boston, Mass., until 2 o'clock, daylight saving time, P. M., Thursday, June 6, 1935, and at that time and place will be publicly opened and read. Bids must be made upon the Department's prescribed Special Form of Equipment Contract for projects financed and constructed under the terms of the National Industrial Recovery Act and Chapter 365 of the Acts of 1933, to which is attached and made a part thereof The Special Contract Provisions Revised June 7, 1934, of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works and the State Emergency Public Works Commission.

Without exception, no bid will be considered unless accompanied by the bidder's Certificate of Compliance, U. S. Government Form P. W. A. 61, Revised March, 1934, to the effect that the bidder is complying with and will continue to comply with each applicable Code of Fair Competition, or, in the absence of such Code or Codes, with the President's Reemployment Agreement. Copies of this Certificate will be included with the "Instructions to Bidders."

Specifications and contract forms may be obtained at Room 167, State House, Boston, upon application. Bids must be accompanied by a properly certified check on, or a certificate of deposit issued by a responsible bank or trust company in the sum of not less than ten per cent of the bid with a minimum of twenty-five dollars, payable to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Checks will be returned after execution of the contract upon demand. A surety bond by an approved surety company will be required from the successful bidder in an amount not less than the full amount of the contract.

The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals, or to accept any proposal deemed best for the Commonwealth, and no award can be made without the approval of the State Engineer PWA, and of the State Emergency Public Works Commission.

The local registration office of the National Reemployment Service from which employee lists for this contract shall be obtained (as required in Article C of the Special Contract Provisions) is Massachusetts State Employment Service, 100 Nashua Street, Boston, Mass.

Outlaw Ransom Payments!

That Will End Kidnapings

THE kidnaping of young George Weyerhauser in Tacoma proves again—if proof is needed—that the payment of ransoms must be forbidden by law.

As long as ransoms can be demanded, and paid, kidnaping will be profitable, and as long as kidnaping is profitable it cannot be stamped out.

That may seem a harsh doctrine.

Everyone who is not a criminal or lunatic sympathizes as deeply with the unfortunate relatives and friends of a victim of "snatching" as with the victim himself.

But it is precisely for that reason that sensible people urge that ransom payments be outlawed.

They see that in no other way can the motive for the crime be removed.

In England and in most civilized countries, kidnaping is virtually unknown.

Canada has been almost exempt from it.

THESE nations rule that the payment of ransom is compounding a felony, and subject the payer to penalties only less drastic than those meted out to the kidnaper.

Nowhere but in the United States, where the payer is not penalized, and in anarchies like China or turbulent and backward lands elsewhere, does kidnaping reach the proportions of a major industry.

All credit belongs to the Federal Department of Justice, and to the police of some of the States, for running down kidnap gangs and capturing or killing the members.

This relentless war has unquestionably reduced the number of these crimes and deterred many would-be kidnapers from the "snatch racket" by fear of life imprisonment or death.

But essential as these measures are, they are like locking the stable door after the horse is stolen.

They are useful, but too late.

Settled in the Skies

The Next War—As Russia Knows

GENERAL WILLIAM T. MITCHELL, former chief of the A. E. F. air forces, made a common-sense and patriotic speech on the Reds the other day in Boston, from which the following paragraphs are taken for your consideration:

"In Russia on May Day, which is the Holy Day of the atheistic Communists, the Soviet government sent aloft so many fighting planes that they looked like giant locusts against the sullen sky.

"In America the same day, the Reds and Pinks who get their inspiration out of Moscow inveighed against militarism in this country.

"They denounced preparedness. They derided better armament."

And, as General Mitchell went on to point out, in the next war populations will be reduced to surrender by the action of enemies with the larger and more efficient air fleets.

The general knows something about war, including war in the air.

Unlike some generals who are still living in the era of the muzzle-loading rifle, he believes that future conflicts will be settled in the skies.

Whether you agree with that or not, you will admit that they will NOT be won on soapboxes.

Not by any nation, certainly, which tolerates soapbox appeals to treason within its own borders and NEGLECTS national defense.

They See Themselves

As Others See Them

It was Robert Burns who first put into poetry the wish that we might have the means to see ourselves as others see us.

And now the American "talkie-movies" are being used in Boston to do even more than that.

The students at Emerson College, studying oratory, not only are able to see themselves as others see them, but also hear themselves as others hear them.

Li Kai Ling, a pupil from Canton, China, where they make firecrackers of Uncle Sam's Fourth of July, is credited with carrying the "talkie-movies" idea into successful execution at Emerson.

We all like to hear a really good orator. It looks as if Emerson will be able to fill a public need.

Cambridge Housing

$8,000,000 Plan

The original new housing plan in Cambridge called for an investment of around $2,000,000.

Leaders announced this week that the project can be expanded, with PWA aid, to $8,000,000 dimensions.

Similar projects are reported to have proven profitable in other sections.

If it is shown that the Cambridge plan promises well, after careful investigation, it should go forward with all possible speed.

Pupils Given Chance

Wise Decision

Boston school authorities have made a wise decision by giving pupils an unexpected opportunity for advancement.

Usually those who fail in certain studies are required to attend summer school.

Because summer school sessions will be cut to a minimum this year, for economy, pupils who would otherwise have had to attend them will be taken into the "next grade."

They will be allowed four months to show that they deserve promotion.

This is indeed a square deal.

A Shortage of Zeros

All Used Up in Statistics

The United States News is authority for this statement:

1—Total expenditures of the U. S. for 124 years (including four wars) from 1789 to July, 1913, were $24,500,000,000.

2—Total expenditures under the New Deal for three years four wars from 1789 to July, 1913, were $24,500,000,000.

The United States News, and others, may be interested to hear that a metropolitan daily newspaper recently had to send a hurry call to the manufacturers of a well-known typesetting machine for more zeros.

Its supply of these characters on its own machines had run short because of the demand for them in printing the statistics of appropriations at Washington.

Radium Victims

By EDWIN C. HILL
GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The news of the death of a woman in New York from chronic radium poisoning is accompanied by the announcement that scientists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are working on a method to remove radium from bodies of the victims of the poisoning.

Edwin C. Hill

The woman, who died at the age of twenty-seven, had been absorbing radium into her system for ten years while engaged in the work of painting the luminous substance on the dials and hands of watches and clocks.

Her case is but another in a chain of twenty which have come to light in the New York district in the past seven years.

Doctors testified that these women had only a year to live, that they would go as thirteen others of their families and working circle had gone before them.

Their story went back to the introduction of the luminous watch faces about twenty years ago. The novelty took on at once, creating a new industry.

The painting had to be done by hand and the substance a derivative of radium was very costly.

The women workers were instructed to wet the camel's hair brushes with their lips instead of dipping them in water which would cause a loss of the radium.

"The Five Dying Women" brought the attention of the public to radium poisoning when they sued the corporation for which they had been painting watches.

To the bizarre medical aide of the case was added an interesting legal phase when the defendant pleaded the statute of limitations.

John A. Backer, vice chancellor of New Jersey, ruled out this defense on the ground that the women were suffering new injuries daily because of the progressive nature of the disease.

The action was settled out of court. Each of the five women received $10,000, free medical care and $400 a year for life.

Professor Robley Evans of M. I. T., had been studying its effects in the system for several years, and has suggested a method of gradually removing radium from the body.

The institute in a statement about his research work says:

"Clinical studies of Professor Evans' methods are being carried on under the direction of competent medical authorities.

"While hopeful progress has been made and several sufferers from radium poisoning have shown improvement, it is too early to determine the final results of the treatment.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 31—Thoughts while strolling: That spooky opalescent light that often suddenly veils New York. Arthur Hopkins suggests the rosy-cheeked Dutch burgher. Add names that come up like a hiccup: Bettina Hall, Hal Phyfe, the photographer, has the glide of an Indian.

Look alikes: Walt Disney and Osgood Perkins. Nobody ever sees Lillian Lorraine any more. And Mary Eaton — what of her? Wherever you see Jack Benny you see Mary Livingston. It's the redhead's day in the choruses. Stanley Walker bucking a big cigar. As big as George Jessel's.

Radio City is becoming the center for ocean travel. Add lonely jobs: The night watch at the Morgan library. A trio of handsome artists: Flagg, McClelland Barclay and Russel Patterson. Everybody turns when Albert Payson Terhune walks by, the big stiff. And that goes for Otis Skinner.

John Farrar always looks as though he had just won a foot race. Swell name for a publicity lady—Ann Ayres. Em of the radio's Clara, Lu 'n' Em has a stone deaf dog, too. Babe Ruth should be a runner-up for Jack Dempsey as a restaurant glad hander.

Harry Evans is going to grow up to look like W. J. Bryan. And he's a crack story teller, too. That real name someone sent from Dayton, O. has me yodeling all over the lot—Shandy Halsley. Three new flea circuses. And there's Charlie Driscoll's yarn about the two fleas saving up to buy a dog.

Hollywood smiles at the capitulation of New York's most conspicuous literary hold out. George S. Kaufman, whose jeers for the cinema folk was the theme of his most auspicious play, "Once in a Lifetime!" has sold himself down the river for five years with the proviso he may come to New York when a stage play calls and will not have to punch a studio clock. He never visited Hollywood until recently.

One of the monthly magazines is in the midst of an editorial experiment that will cheer struggling writers who believe only established names sell material. The publication is buying all stuff blind.

When the manuscripts arrive, stickers are pasted over the names of the authors on the title page and then the manuscripts are sent around to the readers.

I've been to a half-dozen birthday parties lately. Around 53 everybody should begin to sort pedal birthday talk. At 40 it should never be mentioned. But even avoiding the subject, there are always rememberers. On my last birthday Bob Brinkerhoff helped a lot with this telegram:

"It must be swell to reach 90 and not look a day more than 60."

'Dear Govt.'

By Winston Norman

Hon. Sec. of War,
Peace Dept.,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Mr. Sec.:

SCIENCE says if we have a war with Japan it will be fought mostly with Germs.

That would sure be awful, because the things people can give you just sneezing in your face, think what they could give you if they were really trying.

But I don't think we will ever have a war with Japan, because those Jap People have learned to Co-operate. Take the way they are Co-operating with China, for instance, they are helping China get rid of their Bandits again.

What they do, they fly over part of China with airplanes and bombs. Pretty soon they see a Chinese Bandit, so they let fly and they say:

"Heads up, we have dropped another Bomb on another Bandit, everybody that isn't Bandits please co-operate by getting out of the way."

WELL, you can't hardly drop a bomb anywhere in China without it lands on a Bandit, so you can see where Japan is solving their Crime Problem for them.

When Japan gets through Co-operating there won't be anybody left but Honest Chinese Citizens that can dodge bombs, and they will be very Prosperous, because the Real Estate Business will boom on account of so many Jap People moveing in on them, and Chinese Laundrys also, because now that Japan is closer it looks like they can give China all of their dirty linen to wash.

So Japan is itching to Co-operate, and maybe they will want to do it with the U. S. Army, and help us solve our U. S. Crime Problem.

THAT would sure be nice of them, and we need help with our Crime Problem bad, on acct. the U. S. is full of Gangsters, But there is still a few American People that isn't Gangsters, they can't afford a machine gun, but they might look like Gangsters from an airplane, and get a bomb by accident.

So if Japan's aim wasn't very good, they might bomb quite a few innosent Americans such as me.

So I hope they won't co-operate with the U. S. A., I hope they will do it with Russia first, and try to get rid of the Bandits in Siberia.

Siberia is very big, and a long ways between Bandits. Japan would maybe run out of Bombs before Russia run out of Bandits, but they won't know until they try it.

Yours truly, W. NORMAN.

Listen World

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"Do Not Take His Song From Anyone."

My father, Alex Robinson, died when he was still a young man.

He died after years of bitter hard work and great suffering. But in spite of that labor and suffering he never forgot joy.

His beloved in joy, though he had so little of it for himself.

IT IS SO EASY TO WEEP WITH THOSE WHO WEEP, BUT SOEX-

Elsie Robinson

TREMELY HARD TO LAUGH WITH THOSE WHO LAUGH.

MUSIC IN HEART

But my father laughed when laughter came to others. And often he said, "Do NOT TAKE HIS SONG FROM ANYONE!"

I did not understand that saying when I was a child. But now I think, I understand.

Everyone has a song.

Something that makes music in the heart.

It maybe something at which you or I would sniff our noses in scorn—some foolish, common pleasure.

It may be something which you or I would brand as superstition.

It may be something which you or I would call "nutty."

But to that particular spirit it brings happiness and puts music into this weary business of living.

SONG ESSENTIAL

Everyone has a song—

And that song is essential to his life.

Happiness isn't merely an acquaintance.

Happiness is necessary.

We are reborn every time we are happy.

We grow when our spirits laugh.

We slough off old dead tissue and strike new roots in delight.

Joy is food—

Joy is a new chance—

Everyone must have a song in his spirit or he perishes—

Just as everyone must have blood in his veins or he dies—

Do not take his song from anyone.

Do not, by your cynicism or doubt rob anyone of his faith—

Do not through your superior culture spoil the simple pleasure of some commoner soul—

Do not take his song from anyone, for if you do, you take the essential rhythm of his life.

The Supreme Court And the President

AMERICANISM Vs. SOCIALISM

To the Editor of Boston Evening American:

I SHARE the sentiment of your recent editorial, "Thank God For the Supreme Court."

That decision has saved Americanism, and probably saved America.

Mr. Roosevelt was causing, creating, and personally conducting an absolute revolution in this country.

He was contemptuously discarding established American policies, and scornfully repudiating historic American principles.

He was deriding and disdaining the Constitution as an outworn instrument.

He was practicing the policies of State Socialism, and several in his entourage were openly advocating Socialism and rejoicing in what they boldly termed "The Revolution."

We all know that Mr. Roosevelt is a good-hearted man, and probably a well-intentioned man, and most of us dislike to be forced into opposition to him personally as well as to his administration.

But there is no use arraigning Wallace and Tugwell, and excusing the President.

There is no use criticizing Richberg and Secretary Perkins and apologizing for the President.

* * *

ALL these people are the President's appointees. They are in office because he wants them there.

They REMAIN in office because he WANTS them to remain in office; and if he wants them to remain in office it must be because he approves of their acts and policies.

President Roosevelt is responsible for his administration. He is responsible for the personnel of his administration and responsible for the performances of his administration.

If his policies are leading the country into difficulties, we cannot oppose his policies and applaud him.

And if we are to support his policies, which of his policies shall we support—those which he announced before his election, or those which he has practiced since his election?

The two are diametrically opposite.

* * *

THE things he is doing were not in the Democratic platform, and not even hinted at in the platform.

It has been claimed that if he had submitted his present policies to the American people he never would have been elected.

If this is the case, he is in office under false pretenses.

Campaigning by false pretenses is a dangerous method of securing office.

And equally dangerous is his plan to re-elect himself by the greatest distribution of political largesse in the history of the world.

He and Mr. Farley are certainly introducing Tammany methods into national politics on a scale never dreamed of by Tammany.

They are instituting a campaign of political and social demoralization by the use of staggering amounts of money.

* * *

THEY are doing this partly in the interests of relief and reform—and professedly altogether in those interests—but the fact is that shrewd and unscrupulous distribution of moneys in politically made work is being employed to control the electorate, or at least the dependent electorate, of this country.

The administration's distribution of wealth policy is nothing but the plunder of the worthy well-to-do, a policy pursued to the limit by Stalin in Russia, and with some restraint by this administration in America.

But both policies, nevertheless, tend toward the same eventual disaster.

There is little difference between the President's policy and the policy of Huey Long.

Long is franker and bolder than the President, but the same principle of robbing Peter to pay Paul underlies both policies, with the same inevitable result when Peter can no longer be robbed and Paul can no longer be paid.

THE whole spirit of America is being demoralized by this plan of getting something for nothing, and the conclusion will be a dependent class insisting on being supported, an exhausted industrial class, and a thoroughly corrupt political system.

What hope would there be for Americanism or for America were Mr. Roosevelt allowed unrestrained to continue his Socialistic policies?

What hope would there be of a popular protest in the face of a campaign fund of five billion dollars?

The president would be sure to be re-elected to office, and able to perpetuate his policies.

Furthermore, there is no knowing what would occur four years later at the succeeding election.

Unrestrained power and unlimited finances would easily develop a permanent dictatorship.

We have undeniably a virtual dictatorship now.

* * *

WHEN Mr. De Casseres says that the first election of Roosevelt was a coup d'etat, he is telling the exact truth.

By false representations, the present administration was elected, the American system was scrapped, and a political socialistic system, under dictatorial direction, installed in its place.

The crucial question now is, will the country be able to go back to the American system?

The reins of government, and the means of perpetuation itself and the Socialistic dictatorship, are in the hands of the government.

In spite of the Supreme Court decisions, the situation is serious.

Loyal Americans cannot rest supine under this situation.

They have got to do their best to re-arouse the American spirit, to re-establish the independence of Congress, and re-assert the authority of the Constitution.

They have got to re-institute the idea of upstanding, self-supporting Americanism in the minds of the whole people.

They have got to try to revive industry, and revive in the public mind the realization that active industry is the basis of prosperity.

* * *

THEY have got to make the people understand that a complex social system is INTIMATELY BOUND to prosperous country, and ESSENTIAL to the maintenance of prosperity—that accumulations of capital are necessary to the creation of wealth—that the individualistic, capitalistic system has made America the leading nation of the world, and the richest nation of the world—that these systems must be perpetuated if the creation of wealth is to continue—and finally, that if wealth is not CREATED, it cannot long be DISTRIBUTED.

Loyal Americans have a big task, but perhaps it can be accomplished.

At any rate, we can all do our best to accomplish it, and concentrate on that objective.

To accomplish anything, however, we must speak frankly; we must tell the whole truth, we must place the responsibility where it belongs.

And the truth is that it is not the motley crowd of clowns and mountebanks with which Mr. Roosevelt has surrounded himself that are responsible.

It is the man who placed those mountebanks in positions of power and authority where they could exploit their ridiculous and disastrous policies.

AN AMERICAN AND A DEMOCRAT.

Little Vexations

By Edgar A. Guest

This life of ours is much too brief
To fret o'er trifles quickly cured
There is too much of solid grief
By every man to be endured.

If we such keen resentment show
When little irritations sting,
How shall we brave the heavier blow
Which time to us will surely bring?

If small annoyances destroy
What bit of patience we possess,
What armor can our hearts employ
Against life's greater bitterness?

What fools are we our lives to mire
With trifling cares that quickly go,
When it is sure beyond them are
The greater griefs which all must know.
